Marin Carpenters Rebuild Burned Churches In South

By BRUCE COLEMAN

Four carpenters returned to their homes in Marin this week after taking off to help rebuild burned-out Negro churches in Mississippi.

"This is what Mississippi needs," said San Rafael contractor Phillip Drath, "an influx of new blood.

Drath, a Quaker, worked one month as superintendent on rebuilding six churches of the 57 burned in Mississippi during racial strife last year.

He said five carpenters drove straight through to Mississippi in a pickup truck with a homemade camper behind. In Morton, Smith County, Miss., the five men slept in one room in a motel.

The five are: Othell Mallouf of 315 Rydal Avenue, Mill Valley; James A. Holland, 34 Acacia Road, Fairfax; Frank J. Cerda, Lagunitas Road, Lagunitas, and two Berkeleyans, John Meyer and Bob Callagy. Drath lives at 35 Bellevue Avenue, San Rafael.

Relieving Drath and in Mississippi now is carpenter and contractor Richard A. Brown of 253 Forest Avenue, Fairfax. Bill Heick of 139 Belvedere Drive, Mill Valley, a landscape architect and photographer, is doing landscaping around the new churches.

Drath explained that the Committee of Concern, an inter-denominational, inter-racial group of Mississippi religious leaders, raises money for the Negro church rebuilding. The Society of Friends, headed by Friend Lawrence Scott of Philadelphia, coordinates the whole project.

Scott gets phone calls from all over the country from students who want to work on the churches , said Drath. "This is what Mississippi needs — an influx of new blood. But we needed trained people down there like

Coup Is Defeated But Khanh Might Be On Way Out

Viet Nam Loyalist Leaders Give Strongman No Confidence Vote

Informed sources reported that 15 young generals met with civilian Premier Phan Huy Quat this afternoon at Bien Hoa Air Base, 12 miles north of Saigon, and in effect, voted no confidence in Khanh. Khanh's ouster appeared imminent.

The coalition of "young Turk" generals was headed by Brig. Gen. Nguyen Chanh Thi, who now appears to be the most powerful man in South Viet Nam.

POWER STRUCTURE

Air Force Commander Brig. Gen. Nguyen Cao Ky stood out in the emerging power structure as the second most powerful man.

Thi and Ky met with newsmen today and Thi said, "Up to this moment, Khanh is still commander in chief. In the near future we will talk more about it."

In recounting his role in crushing the attempted coup, Ky needled American officials who had persuaded him not to bomb rebel-held Saigon Airport.

READY TO BOMB

"At a quarter of seven Friday night," Ky said, "we were ready to bomb Saigon Airport but U.S. advisers kept calling us. They said that in bombing the airport, we would condemn many innocent persons to death.

"Gen. William C. Westmoreland, commander of U.S. forces in Viet Nam, called me and talked to me, so I postponed bombing the airport until this morning, and by then, our forces had control.

Pope Seeking End To War In Viet Nam

VATICAN CITY (UPI)—Pope Paul VI revealed today he had "confidentially" approached world leaders in an effort to bring about "an honorable and peaceful settlement" of the Vietnamese war.

It was the first time since World War II that a pontiff has let it be known he had used his office to try to help resolve a crucial world situation.

The Pope disclosed his diplomatic activity in general terms in a letter to the Roman Catholic episcopate of Viet Nam in which he said he had prayed for peace.

The letter made public today was dated Feb. 3, at the peak of the crisis between the United States and Communist North Viet Nam.

The Pope did not say what his intervention for peace had achieved among the various countries he contacted.

However, he left little doubt that he had contacted heads of state in both East and West.

Probably the most famous diplomatic negotiation was carried out by the late Pope Pius XII, who got the Germans and Allies to agree that Rome was an "open city."

Prices Down For Marin's Holiday Sales

Today's Independent - Journal is a big one, 36 pages. It had to be large to handle all the announcements in the advertising columns of Washington Birthday sales Monday.

That is when merchants in Northgate Shopping Center, downtown San Rafael, Corte Madera Center, Novato, Mill Valley and San Anselmo are chopping down prices drastically. There will be many bargains.

Although most large retail stores will be open for active business, most groceries, all banks and all government offices will be closed.

CLEANSING LASH OF FIRE

Marinwood Fire Capt. Frank Galvin watches Fagundes Ranch barn, the alleged scene of suffering for underfed, unkept animals, go up in flames today. J. A. Fagundes, operator of the barn, was arrested yesterday on a warrant charging three counts of cruelty to animals. Released on $1,100 bail, he is to be arraigned in Marin Municipal Court at 1:30 p.m. Tuesday. The barn, called a health hazard by county officials, was destroyed at the request of Permabuilt, Inc., present owners. (Independent-Journal photo by Jim Kean)

San Rafael Man, 3 Youths Give Aid In Police Chase

San Rafael police officer Ken Homen was walking near the Western Sport Shop, 902 Third Street, on his beat last night when the store's burglar alarm went off.

Homen ran to the store just after a man hurried out the front door and ran along Third Street. Three youths pointed to show Homen which way he had run.

At the same time, Ray M. Nielsen of 211 Canal Street, Apt. 5, drove by and saw what was happening. He followed the man for half a block, jumped out of his car and threw him to the sidewalk until Homen arrived a few seconds later.

Homen booked Bernard Duane Montbriand, 27, of 1111 Fourth Street, on a burglary charge. Police said he had set off the alarm just after he entered the store through a skylight.

Ranger Snaps 7,000 Photos

Lunar Venture Hailed

PASADENA (AP) — Ranger 8 returned more than 7,000 close-ups of the moon today and scientists said they should be at least as good as the historic first batch of photos from its predecessor, Ranger 7.

The insect-shaped spacecraft crashed at 4:57 a.m. EST into the Sea of Tranquility, a dusty plain tabbed as a possible landing site for astronauts five years in the future.

ROUSING CHEER

A rousing cheer from a crowd of 300 at the Jet Propulsion Laboratory, which made and guided the Ranger, went up at the moment of impact.

Later, at a news conference, Ranger project director, Harris Schuirmeier, said: "The video signals look excellent, and the pictures probably will be at least as good as those from Ranger 7."

Actually, laboratory experts expected them to be better, due to technical improvements and more favorable lighting of the lunar surface.

SIX CAMERAS

Scientists turned on Ranger 8's six cameras 10 minutes earlier than originally planned, and as a result expected to get nearly double the 4,316 shots obtained last July 31 from Ranger 7.

Ranger pictures in the final seconds before impact are rated about 2,000 times better than photos through earth telescopes.

Impact was only 15 miles from the target point selected when the craft was launched

WHO'S POLICY?

She Gets Way In Tuition Beef

By RICHARD LYTTLE

Who makes policy at College of Marin?

Trustees of the Marin Junior College District, the policy-making body, have long struggled with the question of fees now charged for adult education programs.

Thursday, they asked that a policy be prepared.

On the same day, however, Mrs. Jane Sheehy, 36, of 18 Golden Gate Avenue, Belvedere, who has long campaigned against the fees, was told she could enroll in two courses without paying $5 each as a registration fee.

Board President Robert E. Oliver said today there was evidently a "slip up" someplace.

"We're ignorant of this," Oliver said. "I don't believe there should be any exceptions made."

Oliver told the Independent-Journal that the matter would be investigated.

College President Dr. Stephen E. Epler was not available for comment today.

"Gosh, I don't know anything about it," Herbert A. Blanchett, assistant to Epler, said today. "It sounds wild."

Negroes Issue Ultimatum To Selma Official

Four Demands Sought By Monday Or Return To Streets Planned

SELMA, Ala. (AP) — Negroes have issued an ultimatum to Selma Public Safety Director Wilson Baker in their civil rights campaign: "Meet four of our demands by Monday or we will return to the streets."

The ultimatum came last night after Baker, with the aid of a Negro minister, halted an attempted night march by an estimated 300 Negroes. Baker arrested one of the Negro leaders, Hosea Williams, but released him after the Negroes returned to the church from which the march began.

Meanwhile, in Marion, 30 miles to the west, Negroes also walked out of a church to demonstrate but turned back when ordered to do so by the police chief. In a similar situation 24 hours previous, violence erupted leaving one Negro shot and eight persons, including three newsmen, beaten.

The scheduled march at Selma last night was designated primarily to protest the Marion violence.

The four demands issued to Baker were listed by Williams as:

1. Try to hire Negroes as policemen.

2. Try to confer with the white leaders of Selma to attempt to establish lines of communication between whites and Negroes.

3. Help in working out something to expedite the registration of Negro voter applicants.

4. Agree to help in a drive for better paved streets and other facilities in Negro neighborhoods.

Baker indicated to newsmen that he could not answer the demands.

"I told them I'm a police officer," Baker said. "I can't tell the county board of registrars what to do."

Baker, the highest ranking city law enforcement officer, was flanked by white-helmeted policemen as he met the would-be demonstrators near the church steps. He told them their march was "potentially dangerous."

"I am going to do everything possible to maintain law and order in Selma," he said through a public address speaker. "For your own safety please return inside the church."

Williams refused to order the return and tension was heightened when he was arrested. But the Rev. Lewis Andrson using the loudspeaker pleaded with Negroes to return to the church and they did. Williams then was released.

Senate Approves Proposed Amendment On Disability

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate has approved unanimously a proposed constitutional amendment to prevent a breakdown in national leadership in the event of presidential disability.

The amendment, urged by President Johnson in a special message to Congress Jan. 28, was sent to the House yesterday night by a 72-0 vote. Early action is expected there since committee hearings have been completed.

Sen. Birch Bayh, D-Ind., chief sponsor of the proposed amendment, said action to assure continuity in executive leadership is imperative "now that we can destroy our entire civilization in a matter of minutes."

The vice president would become acting president if the chief executive should become incapacitated or otherwise be unable to discharge the powers and duties of his office.

The president could declare his own inability. Or, if he were unable or unwilling to do so, the vice president, with the concurrence of a majority of the Cabinet, could declare the President disabled.

Written declarations would have to be made to the president of the Senate and the speaker of the House.

If a dispute over the president's ability to carry out his duties arose among him, the vice president and a majority of the Cabinet, the amendment provides that Congress would immediately proceed to decide the issue.

If the Senate and the House each determined by a two-thirds vote that the president was unable to discharge his powers and duties, the vice president would continue as acting president. Otherwise, the president would regain his powers.

The other part of the amendment provides that in case of any vacancy in the office of vice president — this has happened 16 times in the nation's history — the president would nominate a successor who would take office upon confirmation by a majority vote of both branches of Congress.

Marin Woman Attends GOP Board Session

Marjorie Chaille of Sleepy Hollow was the lone Marin representative to the board of directors meeting of the California Federation of Republican Women, in Los Angeles Wednesday and Thursday.

Mrs. Chaille reported that the federation passed resolutions opposing two bills:

1. A bill (AB 343) which would allow the California Highway Patrol to use different colored and various makes and models of vehicles.

2. Bills which would create a a Commission on the Status of Women.

Mrs. Chaille said No. 1 was opposed because changing markings on highway patrol cars could lead to abuses, and No. 2 because "we oppose the exploitation of womanhood as an excuse to create another unnecessary burden" on the taxpayers.

WORLD NEWS IN BRIEF

Henry Ford Marries Divorcee

DETROIT (AP)—Henry Ford II, head of the Ford Motor Co., and Maria Cristina Vettore Austin were married last night.

Mrs. Ford

A brief news release said Ford and Mrs. Austin "were married Friday evening, February 19, 1965, in Washington, D.C. The Honorable Milton S. Kronheim Jr., judge of the District of Columbia Court of General Sessions, officiated at the ceremony, which took place in the Shoreham Hotel.

"There was no reception. Immediately after the ceremony, Mr. and Mrs. Ford left for a stay in Europe. They will return to the United States late in March, making their home on Lake Shore Road, Grosse Pointe Farms, Michigan."

Ford

The new Mrs. Ford was born in Vicenza, Italy, Nov. 17, 1929, but has lived most of her life in Milan. She is the daughter of Mrs. Edoardo G. Vettore of Milan.

A British subject for 17 years, Mrs. Ford was married to Robin W. M. Austin of Montreal, Canada, in 1947. They were divorced in Quebec in 1955.

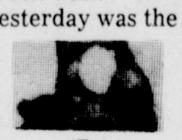
Astronaut Is On The Mend

HOUSTON (AP)—Astronaut M. Scott Carpenter, 39, is recovering rapidly from removal of a bone spur in his wrist to give him back full use of his left arm, officials at Methodist Hospital said today.

Wrist

Carpenter injured his wrist in an accident in Bermuda last July when his motorcycle hit a rock wall.

Also operated on yesterday was the toe on his right foot. The toe was a childhood injury. A pin was removed.



Toe

Officials said the second man to orbit the earth should be out of the hospital sometime next week.

He is scheduled to participate in undersea isolation tests off the California coast in April.

Three Wives Are Too Many

OAKLAND (AP)—Three wives without benefit of divorce, according to police, are merely some of the problems of Marvin McClellan, 23.

McClellan

McClellan was at Alameda County prison farm yesterday, serving a 113-day sentence for failure to pay child support, when Police Inspector Harold Van Zele signed a complaint accusing him of bigamy.

The complaint said McClellan married Camille Smith, 26, on Jan. 20, without bothering to divorce either Judith Ann Keshishian, whom he wed in 1963, or Virginia Young, 21, whom he married in 1962.

Virginia has filed a complaint charging McClellan with being $1,012 in arrears on child support payments.

T. W. Billings, McClellan's former employer, signed a complaint accusing him of taking $200 from the service station till.

'Firebug' Signs Confession

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn. (UPI)—A young man has signed a confession that he was the letter-writing firebug who boasted of starting fires in Minneapolis, St. Paul, Boston and Philadelphia, police said today.

Neussendorfer

Joseph F. Neussendorfer, 22, of Drayton Plains, Mich., was arrested last night and signed a confession shortly afterwards, detectives said. He was to be arraigned today on charges of aggravated arson in fires causing $500,000 damage in the four cities.

Police had begun a search for an arsonist here after fire authorities reported they received an anonymous note on Thursday from a person who said he intended to start enough fires to cause $1 million in damage.

Chief arson investigator Dave Jamieson said Neussendorfer, who was discharged from the Air Force last year, was seen at more than one of the half-dozen fires here within the past week.

Missing In Action

NORRISTOWN, Pa. (AP) — Air Force Maj. Robert F. Ronca, 41, of Norristown, who led last week's U. S. air attack against North Viet Nam, was reported missing in action yesterday in a telegram to his mother.

Russia Failing

COLOGNE, Germany (UPI) — The West German Institute of Industry reported yesterday that the Soviet Union continues to fail in its effort to raise agricultural output to the level of the yearly population increase.

Hope For Talks

WASHINGTON (UPI)—President Johnson has told Gen. Charles de Gaulle's top diplomatic representative that he hopes to meet with the French president in Paris later this year if a mutually satisfactory time can be arranged. The possibility of a Johnson-de Gaulle meeting was discussed briefly and in general terms during a White House meeting yesterday between the U.S. president and French Foreign Minister Maurice Couve de Murville, who renewed the standing invitation.

Glenn Anniversary

WASHINGTON (AP) — Three years ago today, John W. Glenn Jr. became the first American to orbit the earth, a feat that thrilled the country. He has had a rocky road in the past year with a head injury that sidelined him for a long period, but now he is returning to the U. S. space program. It was indicated he likely would engage in the "public interest" part of the program—educating the public on the value of space undertakings and the medical aspects of manned space flight.

Mountain Slide

PUERTO MONTT, Chile (AP) — A mountain slide of rock, ice and earth buried a lakeside settlement yesterday and officials reported no sign of life among the 21 or 22 persons who were believed to have lived there. The settlement was on Lake Cabrera near this town 600 miles south of Santiago.

Kennedy Holiday

LAKE PLACID, N. Y. (UPI) — Mrs. John F. Kennedy, her children, and several of Sen. Robert F. Kennedy's youngsters are spending a brief ski holiday in this Adirondack resort. The Kennedy party went skiing on the slopes of picturesque Whiteface Mountain yesterday and the children took skiing lessons.

Novelist Dies

SANTA BARBARA (AP) — Mrs. Donald Culross Peattie, 64, novelist and widow of the famous author and botanist, died yesterday after a brief illness. Mrs. Peattie, under the name of Louise Peattie, wrote a best seller in the 1930s, "American Acres."

Protest Arrests

NEW YORK (AP) — Police arrested 14 sit-down demonstrators demanding U. S. withdrawal from Viet Nam when they blocked entrances to the U. S. Mission directly across the street from United Nations headquarters yesterday.

Fifth Birthday

Change To Concrete

Gronouski Sworn

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Postmaster General John A. Gronouski was sworn in to a new term yesterday in a White House ceremony.

Goldwater Fears LBJ Wants Out Of Viet

WASHINGTON (AP) — Barry Goldwater says he fears the Johnson administration really wants to withdraw U.S. forces from Viet Nam.

"I join with my former colleagues of the House and Senate in backing 100 per cent the actions of the President against the Communists," Goldwater said last night.

"But I don't want this to be a prelude to turning our tail and coming home, and I have a terrible feeling, knowing this organization as I do, this is exactly what they have in mind."

The defeated Republican presidential nominee told about 1,000 cheering Young Republicans at a dinner that freedom and U.S. honor are at stake in the struggle in South Viet Nam.

And, Goldwater said, Johnson was heeding Republican advice when he sent U.S. warplanes to strike Communist bases in the north.

"We have warned them about South Viet Nam," the former Arizona Senator said. "We've reminded them what happened in Laos and what's going to happen in the rest of Southeast Asia if we don't take some firmness."

Goldwater had this reaction to calls — in the Senate and elsewhere — for consideration of U.S. withdrawal: "Those timid souls amongst us who have no respect for the honor of our nation, who now want us to come home dishonorably, should hang their heads in shame."

Hobo's Friend, Foe Of Taxes Visits Marin

Author Working To Keep Spirit Of Revolt Alive

Hobo's friend, tax-collector's foe and author Ammon Hennacy is stumping Marin County in behalf of "keeping alive the spirit of revolt" and to publicize his new autobiography, "The Book of Ammon."

Hennacy, who bills himself as "a Catholic anarchist," was scheduled to speak at 4 p.m. today in the Peace Center of Marin, Mill Valley, and again at 8 p.m. in Brown's Hall, Mill Valley.

Yesterday and Thursday he made a series of talks at Tamalpais High School, University of California at Berkeley, and on radio stations including KTIM.

JOE HILL HOUSE

Hennacy operates the Joe Hill House in Salt Lake City as a shelter for hoboes. "I take over where the government leaves off," the 71-year-old, fast speaking Hennacy explained.

Hennacy is so much a foe of government and taxes that he refunds sales tax paid by anyone who buys his book.

"I haven't paid any income taxes for over 20 years . . . I picket the tax office every year and they pinch me every year," he related. "I guess I owe about $1,500, but I don't keep track of that, 'cause I'm not going to pay it anyway."

He also proudly points out that he refused to register for the draft in either World War, has picketed against capital punishment, and campaigned for Negro and other minority groups' civil rights in Utah.

NON-CONFORMIST

Non-conformist adjectives tumble from his lips. "I'm a non-conforming Catholic, a pacifist, an anarchist and I don't believe in taxes," he asserts.

"When they arrest me on taxes, they say, 'Do you think you're right and the rest of the world is wrong? Where would the world be if everyone was like you?'

"I tell them there wouldn't be any wars, any jails, any government, any taxes. The world would be a wonderful place."

LONG CAREER

During his long career of rebellion, Hennacy has been a social worker, hobo, father through common law marriage—during which he sent his two children through college by farming—and writer. He has tramped all over the United States.

"I'm in Salt Lake City to spend the rest of my life," he observes. "I went there to found the Joe Hill Center because that's where they killed him. If they'd killed Joe Hill in Fresno, I would have gone to Fresno."

Hill was a martyr and the chief poet of the Industrial Workers of the World, the "Wobblies," executed in 1916 for a Salt Lake murder.

"I don't have any singing or preaching at the center," Hennacy said. "Once a week I have a meeting and talk about Joe Hill and maybe the hoboes learn a little bit about anarchy."

Tam High Trustees Approve Unity Vote

Trustees of Tamalpais High School District yesterday approved consolidation of the vote on unification of the area with the district trustee election on April 20.

Trustees present at the brief meeting at 1:30 p.m. at the district office were J. M. Stubblebine, John C. Siemens and Mrs. Gloria Melbostad.

Meeting Changes

Because of Washington's Birthday, the meeting of the Corte Madera Board of Design will be held at 7:30 p.m. Thursday at the town hall, rather than Monday.

myself to show the kids how to do something — and we need money to send them.

He said many white students have gone from Queens College, New York, and worked with Negro students of Tougaloo College of Jackson, Miss.

"Millsap College in Jackson is the first white college in Mississippi to supply students who want to do somthing. I think this is a real breakthrough," Drath

There are 15 churches being rebuilt of the 57 destroyed.

"These new churches are not shacks. They are very well designed and very nice buildings," Drath said.

Mallouf worked with Holland, Cerda, Meyer and Callagy on the Good Hope Baptist Church at Pulaski.

He said members of the congregation worked with the California carpenters, as well as some locally hired Negro subcontractors. "The Negro women of the congregation brought us hot lunches and plenty of dessert."

He said the churches are meeting places for the people because their homes are small and their families large.

He said many carpenters felt there was an organized effort in burning the churches. The Good Hope Church was burned last July.

"There weren't any white churches burned," commented Mallouf.

"The Society of Friends," said Drath, "is interested not only in repairing the physical building but in bringing up spirit and points of view which will heal the divisions."

He asked that if anyone wishes to contribute to the rebuilding he could send money to the Friends Mississippi Project, 584 Page Street, San Francisco.

Drath said some Mennonites are working on one church. When the Negro congregation took them lunches, they were told by white residents, "That's out or someone will burn your place down."

"The members of the congregation were scared," Drath said, "but two of them said 'we're not going to quit'."

"We told them, 'if they burn your house down, we'll send down a bunch of carpenters to build it up as fast as they can burn it down and it will be better than before."

Drath said a Negro deacon, about 80, told him:

"All these days I have seen rape and burning of houses. Now finally some White people are coming and building our churches. I thank God for it. We thank God that you are here."

Two Injured As Car Rolls Down Hill

A Larkspur man and woman were injured when their car rolled 20 feet down the side of White's Hill west of Fairfax at 1:45 a.m. today.

Both were thrown from the car.

Hurt were the driver, John S. Kean, 28, of 559 Magnolia Avenue, and his passenger, Victoria Williamson, 21, of 87 Via Navarro.

Miss Williamson was listed in fair condition today in the intensive care unit of Marin General Hospital, suffering from abdominal and head injuries and a cut right wrist.

She had not regained consciousness as of this morning.

Kean was given emergency treatment at the same hospital, then transferred to San Rafael General Hospital, where he was held for observation. Doctors said he may have suffered a broken left angle.

Kean was recovering from injuries suffered when he accidentally shot himself in the same foot earlier this month.

The California Highway Patrol said his German-made station wagon skidded broadside off a curve, then went down the bank. The demolished car came to rest on a graded ledge 20 feet below the road.

Officers said the right tire of the car blew out, either just before or just after the car went out of control. The wheel left a gouge mark in the pavement, they said.

Tires Replaced With Bad Ones

Margot E. Jones of A-8 Hilarita Housing, Tiburon, has decided to start inspecting her tires closely before she drives her car, she told sheriff's deputies this week.

Three times in three months, she said, someone has taken one of her tires off her car and replaced it with a worn one. Twice, she failed to discover the switch until the bad tire blew out.

Wednesday, she reported, it happened again. This time she was lucky enough to spot the theft before it led to a blow-out.

RANGER

from Cape Kennedy, Fla., Wednesday.

The first six shots in the Ranger moon probe series failed to achieve their missions.

Ranger 8's cameras were turned on when the craft was 1,350 miles above the lunar surface, streaking in at about 4,400 miles per hour.

Ranger 8's 234,000-mile voyage took about 66 hours and, except for a late-hour decision to run its cameras 10 minutes longer than originally planned, was virtually a duplicate of Ranger 7's flight.

Today's shots were snapped near the moon's shadow line, thus were expected to have more contrast and better definition of detail because of long shadows cast by mountains, rocks and other features. The shadows could reveal craters to shallow or too small for Ranger 7 to detect.

TUTITION

however said he knew nothing about it.

Clymer said Irwin P. Diamond, dean of students, would be the one who would ordinarily answer such a query. Diamond was hospitalized earlier this week with an emergency appendectomy.

"They won't tell you anything," Mrs. Sheehy said.

She explained that she went to the registrars office at the college Thursday to register for an astronomy course and a course in United States History. She refused to pay the fee on her claim that charging a fee for adult courses is illegal.

"The woman put in a call to the administration office and then told me I would not have to pay," Mrs. Sheehy said. She asked that it be put in writing. The woman wrote, "Allow this student to register without payment of fee," on her registration card, Mrs. Sheehy said.

"I think they probably did it just to shut me up," Mrs. Sheehy said.

Although she has won a personal victory in her long battle against fees, she indicated today that she would carry on her battle for the benefit of the general public.

Trustees Thursday night ordered preparation of a policy after learning that there was no legal consensus on the charge of fees among lawyers. They did say Thursday what the policy should be.

Man Booked In Attack

A 28-year-old McNear's Point man was booked by sheriff's officers early today on a charge he raped his 15-year-old sister-in-law while she was baby-sitting at his home.

Held in lieu of $8,250 bail was Robert Lester Marsh of 123 North San Pedro Road, who was arrested by San Rafael police at a Catholic church near his home.

Deputies said Marsh told them he had intercourse with the girl a short time after his wife and mother-in-law left his home at 8 p.m. An hour later, the girl's brother came to the house. The girl told her brother she had been raped, and he chased Marsh from the home.

Marsh then went to the church and told the priest what had happened. After talking for awhile, the priest obtained his permission to call police.

Two Youths Hurt As Car Hits Pole

Two San Rafael youths were hurt when their car ran into a utility pole on the southwest corner of Marquard and West End avenues in San Rafael at 2:32 a.m. today.

In fair condition at San Rafael General Hospital today was Keith F. Kluever, 23, of 56 Fairfax Street, who suffered cuts on his face, chin and ear. Darrell W. Hammock, 20, of 177 Canal Street, was treated for a nose injury and loosened upper teeth.

Police said they were passengers in a car driven by Gary W. Motchar, 21, of 25 Warner Court, San Rafael. Motchar was cited for unsafe speed.

The hardtop coupe left 81 feet of skid marks before hitting the pole, officers said.

Woman Is Booked In Theft Of Rum

Maria Magdalena Craig, 40, of 264 East Strawberry Drive, Harbor Point, was booked by Marin County sheriff's deputies at 12:47 p.m. Thursday on a charge she stole a $6 bottle of rum from the Brice Brothers Market, Town and Country Shopping Center, Tiburon.

Deputies said Mrs. Craig was booked after they picked her up at another store in the shopping center. The market's manager, John D. Rubke, made a citizen's arrest. Rubke first attempted to hold her at the market, deputies said, but she ran out the door.

OBITUARIES

Pruella Stutzman Rites Held

Private family funeral services were held yesterday for Mrs. Pruella M. Stutzman, 81, a resident of Mill Valley for the past 55 years.

Bolinas Weekend Problems Probed

More than 100 persons attending a meeting of Bolinas Community Inc. last night heard county officials and local residents propose ways of solving weekend crowd problems in Bolinas.

County Parks-Recreation Director Kelvin J. Nelson suggested that a parking area be established at the southside of Ocean Parkway, starting at Overlook Drive, and that a path be constructed to provide access to the beach, according to James Dougan, Bolinas Community president.

Dougan said that the proposal, which is intended to relieve parking and traffic pressure on downtown Bolinas, was received enthusiastically by the group.

The possibility of opening up Newport Avenue as a parking area also was considered, Dougan said. He said it would allow for 50 more cars.

More than 1,000 cars jammed into the community last weekend.

Renovated and enlarged rest rooms off Brighton Avenue was suggested, Dougan said. He said another site considered was off Canyon Road, south of Terrace.

Because of the success of the meeting, which also was attended by County Supervisor Thomas T. Storer and County Public Works Director Donald R. Frost, Dougan said the group would begin a series of programs, held every other month, to discuss "the Betterment of Bolinas."

Muir Woods Group Planning For Siren

The Muir Woods Park Improvement Assn. last night heard discussed plans to set up a siren on top of a tower at Sugar Loaf Ridge to be used by the County Fire Department to summon the local volunteer fire brigade.

William A. Rice, president, said the association, in order to help solve roadside litter problems, would ask the state to police the area as part of its road maintenance program.

Also discussed at the meeting were plans for a membership drive, to begin March 1, and for a tree-planting day in March, said Rice.

The group has written to the state asking permission to plant trees in the state park, Rice said.

Man Jailed: 'Small Son Endangered'

Archie Columbus Rowell, 29, of McAllister, Okla., was in Marin County jail yesterday on a felony warrant charging him with endangering the health of a small son.

Bail was set at $5,500.

Sheriff's officers said Rowell allegedly came to Marin County last June 17, taking the child from the wife and mother, Eureka, though the child had only been out of a Modesto hospital—where he was treated for pneumonia — a few days.

The mother and child, Roger, then 18-months-old, were staying at a Point Reyes peninsula ranch, deputies said.

The baby later was returned to the mother, officers said. Rowell, arrested by Modesto police this week on the arrest warrant, was arraigned in Marin Municipal Court late yesterday and the public defender's office appointed to represent him.

Further hearing is scheduled at 1:30 p.m. Tuesday.

Four Children Die In Blaze

HUNTINGTON, W. Va. (AP) — Four small children were burned to death early today about six miles south of here when fire destroyed their small frame home.

The victims, ranging in age from 8 months to 5 years, were the children of Mr. and Mrs. Harold Forth. They were 8-month-old Arietta, 3-year-old Linda, 4-year-old Harold Jr., and 5-year-old Edna.

Mrs. Forth, 21, and another daughter, 2-year-old Lillie, escaped from the fire, but are hospitalized in Huntington.

Mrs. Forth said she tried to rescue the children but managed only to get Lillie out.

Cold Weather Felt In Parts Of Nation

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Cold air spread into the northeastern quarter of the nation today, dropping temperatures below zero in some areas. Freezing weather extended into the Southeast.

The icy air from the northern midwest covered wide areas in Pennsylvania, New York, Ohio and New England. Temperatures were below zero or near zero in many sections, including —8 at Bradford, Pa. Near freezing marks were reported as far south as northern Georgia.

Fairly mild and dry weather continued in most of the western half of the nation. The mercury climbed to the upper 80s in southern California yesterday.

Youth Cuts Arm As Window Breaks

David Miller, 19, of 2785 Heatherstone Drive, Marinwood, suffered a severe cut on his right arm early today when he accidentally smashed a window at 814 B Street, San Rafael.

Miller told police he was walking along the street with two friends when he stumbled and fell toward the window, putting his arm through it. He was treated at San Rafael General Hospital for the cut. The window was in a door to an apartment building.

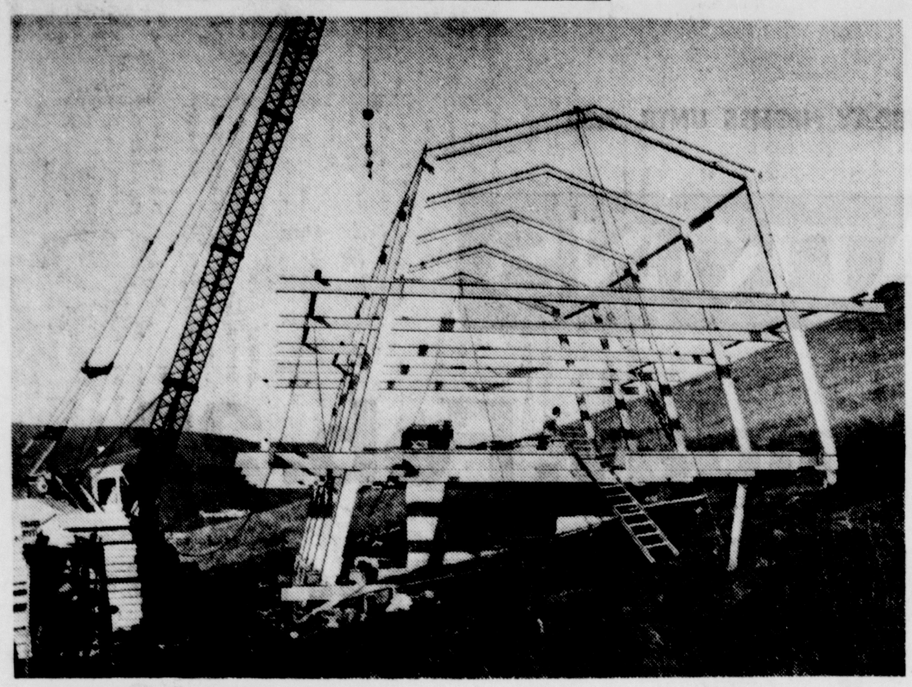
IN MARIN: NORTHGATE SHOPPING CENTER



'INSTANT HOUSE' — New type of steel frame home under construction on Trestle Glen Terrace is visible from Tiburon Boulevard. Steel homes, Tiburon, will use it as a prototype. Five main units are prefabricated from wide flange beams and bolted together in hours, compared to several days required for wood framing. The house shown will have two floors and three bedrooms.

New Type Steel Home Goes Up Within Hours

A new type home with steel framework that can be erected in a few hours is the project of a new firm to be headquartered in Tiburon.

Steel Homes, a partnership of Floyd Derieux of Tiburon and Robert Willis of Ventura, has already started construction of a prototype home on Trestle Glen Terrace.

The "instant home," as it is called, makes use of wide-flange steel members from Kaiser Steel Corp., pre-fabricated by Solano Steel Co. of Vallejo in easily transported sections that can be quickly connected with bolts by an experienced erection crew.

Designed particularly for hillside locations, the house is made of framing sections which include a steel support leg on the downhill side and supported on a ground level foundation on the uphill side. Prefabricated floor and roof modules of plywood are utilized, designed to fit exactly between the upright frames, allowing rapid installation with metal attaching clips.

Outer walls also utilize large prefabricated plywood panels between steel sections. A gambrele roof, reminiscent of New England-style homes, will have cedar shingles.

Derieux said his company plans to market the homes wherever there are hillside sites that would ordinarily run into expensive conventional construction. He said costs are already competitive at this stage of the company's development, but with prefabricated sections mass-produced, he expects to lower prices considerably.

The prototype house was designed by Paul M. Cassayre and David L. Paoli of Napa. It is being built by Koenig Construction Co. of San Anselmo and is to be completed by the end of the month.

Corte Madera Council To Discuss Hiring

The Corte Madera Town Council has called a special meeting for 7:30 p.m. Wednesday in the town hall annex.

The council will discuss filling the job of town manager and town engineer, both to be vacated by Arthur H. Brandow Jr., who is leaving April 1 to become city administrator of Belmont.

Engine Parts Stolen

An engine air cleaner worth $41.25 was stolen from a 1963 Ford in the Bianco Motors used car lot at 1504 Fourth Street, San Rafael police reported yesterday.

GREYHOUND DROPS FARE HIKE PLAN

Greyhound Lines withdrew yesterday its application to the California Public Utilities Commission for authority to increase commute fares to Marin and Sonoma points.

An agreement by the Golden Gate Bridge and Highway District to lower bus tolls from $1 to 13 cents, if Greyhound would not raise its fares, was reached Thursday. The bus company said this agreement made the proposed higher fares unnecessary.

Greyhound said it plans to put 20 new buses in service by the end of May.

3 Students Playing In State Honor Band

Three Terra Linda High School students are playing in the state honor band composed of outstanding student musicians from over the state which will present a concert at the Santa Cruz Civic Auditorium tomorrow.

European beavers are almost extinct.

DRAMA REVIEW

'Country Girl' Role Well Played

By KARL BARRON

Georgie Elgin, "The Country Girl" in Clifford Odets' play, is a woman most women would like to be, and few are. Without seeming to, she holds together the threads of her wastrel husband's life, and sacrifices her own in the doing.

The secret of the play is not to be melodramatic about the doing — and this Ann Scofield achieves in Sausalito Little Theater's production.

Miss Scofield, not concealing a wealth of charm behind big horn rimmed glasses, plays Georgie in an almost flat, cynical monotone with sudden bursts of angry passion that shake the beholder.

FAMILIAR FACE

George Ede, a familiar face with the Aranson company, has moved across the street to play Frank Elgin with consummate skill. Last night there were times when he appeared to have a marble game going in his pockets, but otherwise, he made Elgin a heart-wringer — again without melodrama.

Ede was particularly good in the scene when he is sustaining himself with cough syrup — 22 per cent alcohol, and is deserted by everyone.

Rounding out the triangle of leading characters is Bernie Dodds, the driving your director who is misled by Frank into blaming Georgie for her husband's downfall. Albert Cingolani gives the role an easy naturalness coupled with underlying tension that cuts through sharply in moments of stress.

WELL SUPPORTED

These three are well supported by Abe Kalish as the producer of the play within a play, Paul Unger as its author, and John Klein as the stage manager.

Joanne Leahy plays the ingenue, characterized by Georgie's advice "Cherish your puppy fat." Miss Leahy deserves special mention for her final scene, a sudden change from hysteria to smililng delight as the director embraces her. It was one of those quick little gems, true enough to raise a tear in this hardened eye.

"The Country Girl" was directed by Will Marchetti, who kept a tight rein on the show, and aside from allowing his actors to wander about too much at times, pulled every ounce of talent out of them.

Played in the round, there were no sets, only slightly slow furniture changes. Levonne Bain's lighting added nice touches throughout.

A lot of laughs were missed on opening night, but as timing settles down, they'll be there. And if you're out for an evening's entertainment, you'll be there too.

Ann Scofield alone is worth the price of admission Friday and Saturday nights at 8:30.

Sailor Promoted

William H. Ross of Walnut Creek, son of Mrs. George R. Scott, 22 Amicita Avenue, Mill Valley, has been promoted to captain in the Naval Reserve. Ross is principal of Del Valle High School, Walnut Creek.

Attorney To Talk On Mississippi Work

Douglas P. Ferguson of Sausalito, an attorney who returned Tuesday from Mississippi where he took depositions to assist in Negro voter registration, will speak on his experiences at 7:30 p.m. tomorrow at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Don Jehling, 524 Manzanita Street, Corte Madera.

The talk is sponsored by the Sausalito Presbyterian Church.

Novato Will Gain Another Church

San Rafael and Petaluma volunteers are helping to organize a new United Church of Christ for Novato.

This week and again next Thursday, Novato homes will be canvassed to fill out questionnaires showing how many residents would be interested in attending United Church of Christ worship services. The canvassers include members of the First Congregational Church of San Rafael and the United Church of Christ in Petaluma. The questionnaires have been prepared by the National Council of Churches.

The Northern California Conference of the United Church of Christ is sponsoring the new congregation, which will be known as The United Church of Christ in Novato.

First worship services for the future congregation are scheduled for March 7 at 10:30 a.m. in the Druids Hall at Grant and Reichert Avenues.

A committee consisting of Mrs. John Crowley and Marvin Thompson, Robert Britton, Lud Elvy and Robert Newbold has been appointed to select a permanent site for the new church.

U.N. Conclave Lives Up To Pope's Urging

NEW YORK (AP) — "Love, not fear, must dominate relationships between individuals and between nations."

This was the rudimentary plea of a plain-speaking Pope, the late John XXIII, in his now famed encyclical, Pacem in Terris — Peace on Earth.

Today, two years after it was issued, leaders and thinkers from around the world have gathered here to consider ways for applying its principles in a troubled, dangerous age.

The "International Convocation on Pacem in Terris" opened Wednesday in the United Nations General Assembly hall.

It continues through today, with statesmen, theologians and educators from the Western nations and the Communist East analyzing means of maintaining peace.

The convocation, privately sponsored by the Center for the Study of Democratic Institutions, takes its impulse from the document penned by Pope John less than two months before he died.

Unlike past papal teaching letters, it was addressed not only to Roman Catholics, but to all mankind.

It was hailed by leaders of all faiths, Christian, Jewish, Moslem and Hindu, and by government heads around the globe, including then Soviet Premier Krushchev and President John F. Kennedy.

It summarizes the moral ideals underlying human society, declares the right of religious liberty, of racial equality, of labor justice, and of rights both of private property and community ownership.

Largest Religious 'Body': Unchurched

By LOUIS CASSELS
United Press International

The largest single body of Americans, in terms of religious orientation, consists of those who do not belong to any church.

Even with church membership at an all - time high, non-members constitute 36 per cent of the population, or nearly 70 million persons.

This figure is somewhat misleading, because many Protestant churches do not count children under 13 as members, even though they are attending Sunday school regularly.

But after full allowance is made for such technicalities in record-keeping, the "unchurched" still outnumber the adherents of any particular denomination. America's largest religious body, the Roman Catholic Church, has 45 million members. The biggest Protestant denomination, the Southern Baptist Convention, has 10 million.

Who are the unchurched, and why do they choose not to affiliate with a religious body?

Some are militant atheists. They are convinced that God doesn't exist, and are openly hostile toward religion, which they call an outworn superstition.

Atheists may get a lot of publicity when they denounce religious institutions or file court suits to bar recognition of God in public life. But they are a relatively small minority. Surveys by the Census Bureau and several private opinion research organizations indicate that only 2 or 3 per cent of the American people regard themselves as atheists.

Much more numerous are the agnostics who say, "I do not know whether God exists," but who act habitually on the premise that he doesn't.

Another large contingent of the unchurched is made up of men and women who profess to believe in God, but who see no need to express or nurture their faith through church membership. Some of them are strongly attracted by the ethical teachings of Jesus Christ, but feel that these teachings have been betrayed by institutional Christianity. Others find in the shortcomings of church members a convenient rationalization for not undertaking the duties and disciplines incident to personal involvement in the community of faith. The latter are wont to say that they can worship God just as well on a mountaintop as in a sanctuary. Should someone point out that they usually spend Sunday morning on a golf course rather than a mountaintop, they reply that the principle is the same.

How to reach the unchurched is a question that Christians spend a lot of time discussing. Some have reached the conclusion that the church must radically revise the theological packaging in which the Gospel is presented, to make it more understandable and believable to men who have been conditioned to a scientific-materialistic view of the universe. Others hold that the church can convince the disaffected only by deeds — by acting out the Christian faith in the struggle for racial justice, the war against poverty and other "secular" contexts.

Still others hold a third point of view. They do not minimize the importance of theological renewal, or of Christian social action. They acknowledge the imperative duty — which Jesus laid on his followers in the most explicit terms — of doing everything possible to communicate the Gospel to anyone and everyone who will seriously examine its validity.

But they also question whether there is anything the church can say or do to convince people who are simply not interested in finding out whether Christianity is true or false.

College Students Due For Mission Conclave

An estimated 500 college students from campuses ranging from Seattle, Wash., to Las Cruces, N.M., will converge on the campus of Golden Gate Baptist Theological Seminary at Strawberry Point, March 5-7.

"As Servants of God" will be the theme for the three-day annual Student Missions Conference where college students meet to view fields of church service in new perspectives. During the conference, students will discover or re-discover areas of Christian vocation and mission, according to conference leaders.

Conference speakers will include Nathan Porter of the Home Mission Board, Southern Baptist Convention; William Marshall, personnel associate of the Foreign Mission Board; Kenneth Chafin, professor of Evangelism, Southwestern Baptist Seminary, Fort Worth, Tex.; William M. Dyal Jr., associate secretary of the Southern Baptist Christian Life Commission, and Paul Barnes, Baptist Student secretary for Arizona Baptist.

A theme interpretation will be presented by the Riverside California Baptist College Drama Trio under the direction of Mrs. Jeanne Davis.

Bay Area sightseeing, personal conferences with denominational workers, group discussion sessions, and meetings with western United States students will complete the week-end conference.

Novato Congregation Opens Campaign For Revitalization

Grace Lutheran Church of Novato this week launched a campaign to reactivate potential "drop-outs" on the church membership rolls.

Preliminary meeting for the campaign was held Thursday, according to the minister, Rev. Arthur Koehler.

"We in Grace Church have our share of 'drop-outs' even though our church enrollments and Sunday attendance are exceptional to the . . . national picture" of swelling memberships and declining attendance, Reverend Koehler explained. "We attribute this to the fact that we are living in lush suburbia, the easiest of places to do church work in this age."

REV. ARTHUR KOEHLER
Sights on drop-outs

The church has begun holding "Bible cells" in members' homes and the congregation has voted to increase the number of Sunday services, as well as to initiate a service each Wednesday beginning next month.

Renovation of church office space and employment of two more secretaries are planned, Reverend Koehler said. Another choir has been started; Sunday school recruiting contests have brought enrollment to 215 pupils.

The church's dozen elders are beginning an extended spiritual exercize course, and the church will be spruced up inside and out, as part of the revitalization campaign, the minister added.

Church members who fail to respond to these efforts by greater participation in the church itself, may be eventually removed from the membership rolls, Reverend Koehler said. . . . "Those who are inactive and unable to meet the standards of our denominational affiliation may find themselves happier in some other Christian fellowship," the minister said. "In taking these steps of discipline we will exercise Christian love and humility . . . no member will be counted out who, when paid a personal visit, evinces seriousness of intention to continue with us," he concluded.

Seminary Offers Help Of Architect

Ernest B. Myers of the church architecture department of the Baptist Sunday School Board of the Southern Baptist Convention, will be on the campus of Golden Gate Baptist Theological Seminary March 9 and 10 for a church architecture exhibit and conference.

A native Mississippian, Myers is a graduate of Mississippi College, Clinton, and has done graduate work at New Orleans Baptist Seminary, Peabody College, Nashville, and at the University of Arizona, Tucson. He was state Sunday school secretary and church building consultant of the Baptist General Convention of Arizona for five years prior to his work in Nashville.

The purpose of his visit will be to conduct conferences with pastors and others interested in church building programs. Displays will be set up of various building materials and furnishings including music and educational equipment.

Club Will Discuss George Washington

February's meeting of the XL club of Redwood Presbyterian Church in Larkspur will be centered around a patriotic theme, at 7 p.m. Tuesday in the main building of the church.

"George Washington, Father of Our Country—What About Him?" will be the club's topic.

HON. GIDEON SAGUY

Kol Shofar Rite Will Feature Consul Judge

The State of Israel's highest ranking official in the Bay Area will join a prominent Marin Catholic layman in patriotic observances at 8:30 p.m. Friday in the Washington-Lincoln Sabbath worship of Congregation Kol Shofar, in the Marin Jewish Community Center, San Rafael.

The special guests are the Hon. Gideon Saguy, consul for the State of Israel, and Superior Court Judge Harold J. Haley.

During the service, the flags secured through the efforts of the Kol Shofar Sisterhood will be dedicated, according to Rabbi Morris Schussheim. The American flag and that bearing the Star of David will flank the altars at all future services, Rabbi Schussheim explained.

The service Friday evening will point out similarities between the relatively new State of Israel and the United States in the days of George Washington and Abraham Lincoln, in their struggles for freedom.

Lecturer To Conclude Psychological Series

Final lecture to be given by Dr. J. Hudson Ballard in the series at Novato Presbyterian Church will begin at 7:30 p.m. tomorrow. The title will be "The Psychology of Influence," concluding four talks around the theme "psychology and better living."

Dr. Ballard is emeritus professor of pastoral psychology at San Francisco Theological Seminary in San Anselmo.

Ex-Spoprtscaster Serves Souls Of U.S. Warship's Lonely Crew

ABOARD USS HANCOCK (AP)—The Protestant chaplain aboard this aircraft carrier smokes cigars and loves to talk baseball.

But because Lt. Cmdr. Wendell R. Begg was a baseball announcer before he turned to the ministry, that's understandable.

But now his job is a different one—ministering to men aboard the 7th Fleet carrier in the South China Sea, off Viet Nam.

Begg, born and raised in LeMars, Iowa, studied business and radio advertising at Dake University. While there he was asked to become a baseball announcer. After a short stint announcing Class B ball he moved to Sioux City, Iowa, and moved into Class A ball announcing.

But Begg had been studying for the ministry and was committed to spend some time in a seminary. The stocky announcer with a perpetual 5 o'clock shadow had to choose—baseball or the ministry.

He chose the church and spent three years as a minister at Elgin, Ill., before taking a commission as a Navy chaplain.

Since he joined the Navy in 1956 Begg has been home only two years, but he said he finds a challenge in being a Navy chaplain that he never found in civilian life.

Much of Begg's time is spent in counseling men aboard the Hancock. His toughest job is acting as a liaison between the men at sea and the man's family thousands of miles away.

For the married man, Begg said, it is a never-ending problem of being away from home.

For all the men, mail is vital. It is by far the biggest morale factor in the fleet. A man spending seven months of the year away from home can become extremely lonely on this big ocean, he said.

Begg said men come to see him nearly every day, asking why they aren't getting mail from home, or discussing family problems with him. During the destructive storms and loafs on the West Coast, at least 15 men were visiting him daily.

The chaplain praised the mail service on this carrier, where mail is delivered daily by plane.

Begg, whose wife and three boys live in Castro Valley, near San Francisco, said: "It is very personal to be remembered by the family back home. It has affected me and I can see how it affects others."

Great emphasis is placed on Sunday worship.

Sunday's Catholic and Protestant services each draw about 200 men. A Bible study class and "singspiration" also are held weekly.

The chaplain gives much of the credit for the successful religious program to the support given by the Hancock's commanding officer, Capt. Frank B. Stone of Jacksonville, Fla.; and the executive officer, Capt. H. Spencer Matthews of Sikeston, Mo.

Unitarian-Unversalists Call Membership Meeting

Members of the Unitarian Universalist Church of Marin will hold a special meeting immediately after their 11 a.m. worship services tomorrow, to decide on a name for their newly-built church, and tend to other business.

Congregation president G. William Bauer reported that it has been proposed that the new church be called the "Unitarian Universalist Community Center" — without, however, changing the name of the organization itself.

The congregation will also receive the auditor's annual report and discuss financial status of the church.

First Sunday service in the new church will be March 7, according to Rev. Karel F. Botermans, minister.

City's Problems To Be Discussed

William Grace, director of the Inter-City Council in San Francisco, who handles urban work for the Presbyterian Church in the bay area, will speak on "The Challenge of the City" at the home of Rev. James E. Symons, 335 Jean Street, Mill Valley, Wednesday at 10 a.m.

Women's Group Plans For Rites Tomorrow

Mrs. Ora Waddell, president of the Women's Missionary Council for the San Rafael Assembly of God Church, will lead her group in a special program in the church worship service at 11 a.m. tomorrow.

The observance will be part of a nationwide celebration of the 14th anniversary of the Women's Missionary Council. The San Rafael group is one of more than 6,000 such organizations in the country. The organization annually contributes more than a million dollars for mission activities, according to the local pastor, Rev. L. H. Sheets.

Woman Speaker At Family Night Dinner In Hub

A verbal and pictorial account of church activities in India and Pakistan will be presented at the Feb. 24 family night dinner of San Anselmo Presbyterian Church by Dorothy C. Wagner, secretary for women's relations of the commission on ecumenical mission and relations of the United Presbyterian Church U.S.A.

Miss Wagner, formerly a missionary in China and long active in church women's leadership, also has travelled extensively on the Indian subcontinent. She will show slides she took there.

The speaker appeared at both luncheon and dinner meetings of the women's organization of the Redwood Presbyterian Church of Larkspur earlier this week.

Film Series Fails

The classic film series sponsored by the adult programs committee of the Unitarian Universalist Church of Marin has been cancelled, due to lack of response.

PORTUGUESE LEGEND TOPS ALL

Modern Pastors May Think Their Church Going Slowly

LISBON (AP) — When you're on a job that never seems to get done in Portugal you say "It's like the building of Santa Engracia."

The church of Santa Engracia, dominating Lisbon from one of the city's seven hills, still isn't finished after more than 300 years.

As the story goes, a church stood on the spot in the last part of the 16th Century. One night its sacristy was burgled and all the ecclesiastical treasures taken. The church was pronounced defiled, and it was decided to build another and grander one.

Meanwhile, a young Jew named Simao Pires Solis was arrested and charged with the theft. He pleaded innocent, but was sent to the stake.

Now Simao was apparently carrying on a love affair with a pretty young nun in a nearby convent. When he was executed it is said that his dying words were "As surely as I die innocent, will the building of Santa Engracia never be achieved." On her death, the ghost of the nun was said to have taken up residence in the unfinished church, whose building had already begun. Indeed, the cupola collapsed before the church could be finished.

Another church was begun, but the builders worked with little enthusiasm, for the legend of the nun frightened them.

The next disaster was caused by the earthquake of 1775, in which the church suffered serious damage.

In 1835 the War Ministry took over Santa Engracia Church, first as a guards barracks, then later a munitions depot and boot factory.

On the fall of the monarchy in 1910, the government once more decided to recognize the church as such, and it was listed as a national monument. It was to be finished and used as the national Pantheon. It is still unfinished.

Nevertheless, four years ago the government decided that it shall be finished come what may. Work is going on, and is reported nearing conclusion.

HOW TO PLAY

WINNING BRIDGE

By ALFRED SHEINWOLD

An Opponent's Weakness Makes You No Stronger

When the player at your left deals and bids three of a suit, your partner must decide whether or not to enter the bidding.

Partners are what we get for our sins, so I'm careful not to complain. I just want to observe that my partner, like the boy who twisted the mule's tail, isn't as pretty as he once was, but he knows more.

East	South	West	North
3 ◇	3 ♡	Double	All Pass

Opening lead — ♠ K

West took his top spades and shifted to a diamond. East took two diamonds and led a club. West took the ace of clubs and then sat back to wait until he got his four trump tricks.

THREE HEARTS

South collected three hearts and one club, for a total of four tricks. The opponents collected 1400 points. I collected the cards and began to shuffle them silently while my partner explained that the opening bid showed weakness, so that he just had to show his hearts.

It was a long explanation; they always are. Don't bother to study such explanations. You won't need them if you make it a point not to enter the bidding at a high level unless you're pretty sure of six or seven playing tricks even against very bad breaks.

COUNT POINTS

If you can't count your playing tricks you probably don't have a suit good enough for a bid, but you can get some idea even if you just count your points. If your hand would not be worth an opening bid of one, you can't be blamed for passing at the level of three.

In this case, for example, South has 9 points in high cards. He should expect to make game with somewhat less than the usual 26 points because of the length of his hearts, but he still needs a dummy with 14 or 15 points and some sore of heart support. If North has 14 or 15 points and some sort of heart it isn't necessary for the 9-point hand to start the ball rolling.

What would happen if South passed in this case? West would bid three notrump and go down. But then I'd have missed a very interesting explanation of why a partner feels he has to give the opponents 1400 points.

DAILY QUESTION

♣ K Q

What do you say?

Answer: Pass.

There is no need to make a shutout bid just because you have a long suit. The hand is not worth a normal opening bid of one heart.

ALMANAC

Today is Saturday, Feb. 20, the 51st day of 1965 with 314 to follow.

The moon is approaching its last phase. The morning star is Mars. The evening star is Jupiter.

On this day in history:

In 1792, President George Washington signed the first U. S. postal act, formally establishing the federal post office, which had been set up temporarily in 1789.

In 1809, the U. S. Supreme Court ruled the power of the federal government was greater than that of any individual state of the Union.

In 1933, following the lead of the Senate, the House of Representatives voted for repeal of the prohibition amendment.

In 1962, U. S. Astronaut John Glenn orbited the earth three times in a space capsule.

A Thought for the Day — French philosopher and author Voltaire once said: "It is better to risk saving a guilty person than to condemn an innocent one."

TIME AND TIDE

Mississippi Voter Signup Film Slides Are Available

Film slides taken of the voter registration work in Mississippi are available to any organization which wants to view them, attorney Robert D. Carrow of Novato announced last night.

Carrow said he and Joseph Forest of Novato and Alvin Goldstein Jr. of Sleepy Hollow have about 100 slides which they took during their recent visit to Mississippi to help gather testimony on the denial of voting rights to Negroes.

Novato Parking Lot Ideas Aired

A downtown parking lot for Novato can be obtained through either private subscription or an assessment district, Robert Lagle, Novato city planner, told the Novato Downtown Improvement Assn. Thursday night.

Lagle said the merchants could band together to finance such a lot.

Alfred Bowman, president, reported that several other stores have plans to change their fronts to the old western style. This is continuing the effort to make the section of Grant Avenue from Machin to the railroad into an "old town."

Classrooms Use

The new classrooms being built at Wolfe Grade School in Kentfield will house the fourth, fifth and sixth grades, not the seventh and eighth as was stated in the caption of a picture of the construction that appeared in the Independent-Journal Monday.

Orchestra Seeks

The College of Marin Community Orchestra has issued a call for violin and viola players. A rehearsal will be held Monday at 8 p.m. in the Butler building on the College of Marin campus in Kentfield.

Plan Report Due

The first report on the $12,000 Novato Sanitary District master plan will be presented to the board next month, directors were told Thursday night by Jenks and Adamson of Palo Alto, consulting engineers.

Santa Rosa 95, Marin 73; 18-Game Streak Snapped

By JIM GILMARTIN
I-J Sports Editor

Santa Rosa's Bear Cubs, playing their "best game of the season," smashed College of Marin 95-73 last night at Kentfield to convincingly break the Tars' 18-game win streak and create the liklihood of a tie for the Golden Valley Conference championship.

A standing room only crowd of 1,700 packed Marin's new gym, expecting the Tars to humble Santa Rosa for the third time this season and lock up the undisputed title and a bid to the State Junior College Championship Tournament at San Mateo next month.

Instead, they saw Coach Glen Albaugh's Rose Citians stop Marin's vaunted fast break, hand the Tars only their third loss in 23 games, and go ahead of the Tars (7-1) into first place in the GVC with an 8-1 record.

PROBABLE PLAYOFF

Each team is favored in its remaining games and a co-championship and subsequent tournament playoff is probable, but Marin Coach Cal Riemcke said Santa Rosa appears to have the edge in the remaining schedule. See "Along Marin's Sports Trail" for coaches' comments.

By stopping Marin's fast break before it could get started, the Bear Cubs crippled the heart of the Tar attack that in seven previous league victories averaged 97 points a game. Santa Rosa also cut through the Tar defense with surprising ease, scoring 25 of its 38 field goals from inside the key area.

All five Santa Rosa starters scored in double figures with a fancy shooting show that saw the visitors, who were playing for the first time in Marin's new gym, hitting 53 per cent of their floor shots.

Marin, on the other hand, was off target, getting only 33 pct. marksmanship. The Tars were forced outside and scored only 10 buckets from inside the key.

Santa Rosa post man Tom Stewart, a 6-6, 220-pound brute imported from Piedmont High, was all advance notices said he was—and then some. The GVC's individual scoring leader exceeded his 28-point average with 30 markers, hitting 11 shots in 18 attempts, all from under the bucket, and hauling in 11 rebounds, exceeded only by big Jim Halm's 15 rebounds for the Tars.

Little Del Walker, a 5-10, 150 pounder, hit 16 points, Bob Cameron added 15 and Mike Dunsing and big Mike Francis (6-6, 225) chipped in 11 apiece to give the Bear Cubs a five-pronged attack, something they lacked in losing two previous meetings with the Tars, 73-76 and 77-94, the latter in league play. Since then the Northerners have come on strong, winning their last seven games.

Marin more than held its own in the early going last night, leading for most of the first 10 minutes, thanks mainly to the deadly left-handed shooting artistry of ex-San Rafael ace Rod Monti who made good on his first five shots, mostly from outside. In fact, Marin made six of its first eight shots to hold a 13-8 lead after five minutes, but Santa Rosa, led by Walker and Dunsing, caught the Tars with 10:33 left in the first half and took the lead for keeps at 27-26 on a Walker lay-up with 7:50 to go. In an eight-minute spurt Walker tallied 10 points and Dunsing 6 to swing the tide in favor of the invaders.

HALFTIME SCORE

In the last six minutes of the half Marin scored only one field goal, a 30-footer by lefty Monti, but stayed within range by scoring seven free throws. Santa Rosa left at halftime with a 40-35 lead.

Marin started a short-lived comeback early in the second half. Three foul shots by guard Jay Johnson, two charities by Monti and a tip-in by the 6-7, 220 Halm closed Santa Rosa's lead to 44-42 after four minutes of play. Santa Rosa lengthened it to 49-42, but Marin again retaliated on buckets by Terra Linda alumnus Bill Brody and substitute Pete Coy and two charities by Monti, making it 48-50 with 15:24 still remaining.

But that's all she wrote as Santa Rosa unleashed a blitz that saw the Bear Cubs slash through and over the Tar defense.

ALONG MARIN'S SPORTS TRAIL

By JIM GILMARTIN

Schedule Favors Santa Rosa; Tars Face Two Rugged Trips

Cal Riemcke looked like a guy whose fancy new sports car had just been demolished. "We didn't play well at all, but of course Santa Rosa made us look poor," he started off.

The angular College of Marin coach was trying to explain his Tars' 95-73 thrashing at the hands of Santa Rosa's Bear Cubs — a surprising result in that Marin twice previously had whipped the Rose Citians and had momentum from an 18-game winning streak and 20-2 record, best in California.

Riemcke is above the alibi level, but under questioning he admitted the absence of injured regular guard Barry Hachmyer badly hurt the Tars' bread and butter play — the fast break. "We used regular forwards in Barry's guard spot, but it just didn't work," Riemcke explained. "You need two quick guards to work the fast break effectively and we missed the speed. We couldn't get going."

He added that Hachmyer, who suffered a shoulder injury in a fight, is expected to return to action by next weekend, but fears a letdown by the Tars in a tough assignment tonight when they face Sierra at Auburn after a long bus journey today.

"The remaining schedule favors Santa Rosa," said Riemcke glumly. After tonight's toughie, the Tars face another rugged road trip to Weed and Redding next Friday and Saturday to meet Siskiyous and Shasta, respectively before returning home for the regular season finale against Napa on March 3. The Tars can't afford another loss.

Giants Top Bulldogs; Earn Bid To Tourney

By RALPH CHATOIAN

It's all over but the shouting in the Marin Athletic League basketball race.

Redwood clinched the title and a bid to the Tournament of Champions last night with a pressure-packed triumph over San Rafael High School's Bulldogs on the Redwood court. It was 61-53.

"It might sound corny, but this is a team called desire," beamed Redwood coach Dick Hart after he was carried off the court by happy, shouting players and well-wishers.

"They won only four of their first 13 games and then won 10 in a row. That's really something," said Hart.

That 10-game win streak is the biggest in Redwood's basketball history. After losing their league opener to Drake, 53-35, on Jan. 12, the Giants then romped through nine straight league games, plus a practice encounter with Petaluma.

Last night's game was a tight battle until the final quarter when Redwood unleashed a 25-point attack. Redwood led after the first quarter, 14-12, San Rafael led at half, 26-23, it was tied at 36-36 after three quarters, and then came the final period.

Redwood, paced by veteran forward Tom Bly, reeled off 12 straight points during the final period while San Rafael scored zero. That made the score 55-42 with 2 minutes and 37 seconds left in the game and caused tournament fever to spread through the Redwood rooting section. The championship was only a couple of minutes away and everybody knew it.

Bly was the spark that ignited the Redwood flame in the second half. He only scored two points in the first half but came back with 14 big points in the second half when they really counted.

"They (San Rafael forwards) were keeping him out to far in the first half and he couldn't do much shooting," said Hart. "We changed our plan for the second half and had Bly work his way under the basket."

Bly and guard Russ Smith tied for Redwood high honors with 16 points each. Bly was hitting underneath on short jumpers and Smith was the man from the outside. Helping out a balanced attack were center Chuck Meyer with 12 points, guard Charles Davis with 10 and forward Don Detrick with 7.

San Rafael's Ken Erdman gave dazzling performance of shooting from the floor, from spots on the court that would snap a dozen tape measures. From 25 and 30 feet out, if he was left open he would set and shoot—two points. If he was guarded from that same distance, he would jump and shoot—two points. He made good on 10 shots to tally 20 points, high for the game. The second barrel

DRAKE NIPS NOVATO; MARIN DEFEATS TAM

Pirates Rally; Curley Sinks Winning Goal

Drake put on a fantastic display of scoring power in the last quarter to edge Novato, 54-52, last night at the Pirate gym to maintain sole possession of third place in the Marin Athletic League.

The Pirates, behind by 17 points midway in the third quarter, won on a fade away jump shot by junior guard Will Curley with five seconds left in the contest. Curley was the Pirate big gunner for the night as he made 12 of his 20 points during the last quarter.

Coach Carl Brown of Drake changed his offensive strategy during the last eight minutes by allowing Curley and teammate Bill Ingram to drive more for the basket.

The strategy worked perfectly.

WINNING BUCKET

With 3:20 left in the game, Drake tied the contest for the first time and after trading four shots with Novato came down the court with less than 20 seconds remaining. Forward Larry Stein tried to break the tie with a 15-foot jumper, but the ball bounced off the rim and into the hands of Curley, who in one movement jumped and put the ball in with the winning two points.

The Pirates, who evened their league record at 5-5, outrebounded Novato 31-25 with Brian Tobin, the 6-3 center taking in 13 rebounds.

BOGOTA, COLOMBIA — Al Besselink of Grossinger, N.Y. shot a course record eight-under-par 64 for the halfway lead in the Bogota Open with a 36-hole total of 135.

RACING

TUCSON, Ariz. — Bob Charles of New Zealand shot a second round three-under-par 69 for a three-stroke lead at the halfway mark of the $46,000 Tucson Open with a 36-hole total of 134.

ARCADIA, Calif. — Home Ruler, $25, beat Honored Sir by 1½ lengths in the Riverside Handicap at Santa Anita.

Morrell, Soden Pace Wildcats To Victory

Marin Catholic took advantage of a cold fourth quarter by Tamalpais to win a 45-35 victory over the Indians last night in a Marin Athletic League contest at the Tam gym.

At the end of the third quarter Tamalpais was leading 31-30, but a 10-foot jump shot by Guard Dave Morrell moved the Wildcats ahead for the remainder of the contest.

The Indians couldn't find the range during the last four minutes and made only one basket while M.C. used a fast break and scored 12 points with Morrell and Tom Soden making most of the buckets.

SODEN HOT

Soden was hot from the outside as he hit four out of six shots from beyond the free throw line and the other two on driving layups.

Tamalpais was stymied as its top scorer, Larry Gray, made only 13 points under the fine guarding of M.C. guard Bill Shine.

NFL Acts To Unscramble Scrambling Quarterbacks

By PATRICK McNULTY

PALM DESERT (AP) — The recipe for National Football League officials today has changed to unscramble scrambling quarterbacks such as Fran Tarkenton, Bill Munson and George Mira.

"Running quarterbacks have changed the game in the past few years—so we've got to adjust the number of officials to keep track of them," said Mark Duncan, supervisor of NFL officials.

Duncan spearheaded the move, approved at the NFL meeting yesterday, to expand existing five-man crews to six officials for league and exhibition games. The new official, as yet unnamed, will keep time as well as a sharp eye on artful dodgers such as Tarkenton of the Minnesota Vikings, Munson of the Los Angeles Rams and Mira of the San Francisco 49ers.

There have been growint complaints that scrambling quarterbacks frequently scramble over the line of scrimmage before passing. With five officials spread over the field, such infractions were sometimes difficult to call, hence the extra official was added.

Baseball started with only one umpire and now has four, Duncan observed, adding that pro football is expanding in the same manner.

Backing up his contention that more officials make for a better game, he offered this example:

Baltimore trailed Cleveland, 0-17, in the third quarter of last season's championship game. Trying desperately to get the Colts back in the game, Johnny Unitas threw long to Jimmy Orr, who made a diving catch as he sailed out of bounds. Was Orr in bounds, or not? The headlinesman ruled 'no.'

"From the press box where I was sitting the catch looked good," said Duncan. "But then I saw headlinesman George Murphy waving his arms 'no.' He ruled Orr did not have possession when he went out of bounds.

Ir. the dressing room after Baltimore's humiliating defeat, Duncan spotted Murphy.

"What about that play, George? Orr looked in bounds to me."

Murphy, ex - University of Southern California quarterback and all-pro in the old All American Conference, said quietly:

"Mark, it was a great catch, but Orr was juggling the ball when he went out of bounds. I was standing right on the sidelines." Movies later proved Murphy right.

"So the more good officials on the field the better," Duncan said. "The new sixth man will be in a good spot to keep a close watch on the quarterbacks—if their passes are forward or lateral and whether or not they are over the line of scrimmage. The new official also will free the field judge so he can stand under the goal post for a really accurate report on whether a field goal sails through the uprights."

This was the first change in the NFL officiating staff since the crews were expanded from four to five men in 1947. The new man then was created primarily to keep an eye on the man in motion, which was relatively new in the league.

Charles Fattens His Lead

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — Bobby Charles almost passed up the $46,000 Tucson Open Golf Tournament because he was tired, but the lanky left-hander had a three-stroke lead going into today's third round.

And, he said he hadn't played better for some time.

Charles, a former British Open champion and the only lefty to win an American pro tourney, shot a conservative three - under - par 69 yesterday widening his first round lead. He has a 36-hole total of 134, ten strokes under par.

Tom Shaw of Portland, Ore., was second at 137 and Jim Ferriell of Louisville, was four strokes back at 138.

Charles entered the Tucson tournament five minutes before the deadline. He said he was tired after six straight weeks on the tour but added: "I didn't have any place to go."

He burned up the 7,200-yard Tucson National Golf Club course with a 65 Thursday but took things a little easier yesterday.

"I just tried to get the ball up on the green in regulation and get it with two putts," he said.

Charles, 28, has been extraordinary at both in recent outings. He hasn't missed a green in the first two rounds of the Tucson tournament, and he has gone six straight competitive rounds without three-putting.

Shaw and Ferriell both shot 69's yesterday to stay near the top. Shaw drew even with Charles briefly but fell back with bogeys on the 16th and 17th holes.

Frank Beard of Louisville, just one stroke off Charles' first round lead, lost his touch and soared to a 74 yesterday for a two-round total of 140.

Twelve players, including some of golf's biggest names, were still within striking distance at 140. Besides Beard, they included British Open champ Tony Lema, and Bill Casper Jr., the top over-all money winner on the tour this year.

of the Bulldogs' attack, Terry Overlid, notched up 18 points, mostly on shots from under the basket.

Redwood led throughout the first quarter, at one time leading by seven points, 14-7. But then San Rafael closed the gap to 14-12 by the end of the quarter.

Then starting the second period, Tom Untermann pushed a bucket to tie it at 14-14. Myer put Redwood in front again with two free throws, 16-14. And into the picture steps Erdman. He scored from 20 feet out to tie it up, and then seconds later hit from 25 feet out to put the Bulldogs in front.

In the third quarter San Rafael moved out in front by five points, 28-23 but Redwood fought back. The lead changed hands four times before the buzzer sounded with a 36-36 tie.

In the fourth quarter, Erdman lost a contact lens and play was held up, with 6:11 left. At the time, Redwood had a slim lead of 41-40. He found the lens, but that act seemed to put the whammy on the Bulldogs. In the next three and one-half minutes, San Rafael scored only two points to Redwood's 14 and that was the game. Redwood bulged its lead to as many as 13 points, 59-46, with just a little more than a minute left in the game.

Looking at the scoring figures, the game was actually won at the free throw line. San Rafael beat Redwood from the floor, sinking 24 field goals to 22 for the Giants, but Redwood hit 17 free throws to only 5 for San Rafael. Redwood had 17 out of 25 for 68 per cent and San Rafael was 5 out of 9 for 56 per cent. San Rafael committed 18 fouls to Redwood's 11.

Redwood got balanced rebounding from its front line. Meyer had 12, Bly had 10, and Detrick 9.

The Giants still have two league games remaining, one against Tamalpais Tuesday and the other against Marin Catholic Friday. Then two weekends of tournament play lie ahead. The Gridley Invitational will be March 4-5-6 and the Tournament of Champions in Berkeley will be March 11-12-13.

Tam Snares Lead In 'B' Basketball

Tamalpais roared into first place in the Marin Athletic League Class B basketball standings last night by knocking off Marin Catholic, 42-33 before a packed house at the Tam Gym.

The Indians, under the coaching of Al Ahlsten, were never behind as their two big gunners. Steve Woodward and Leroy Barrow, had another fine game.

Woodward connected for 15 points, mostly on jump shots from the side, and Barrow, only a freshman, made eight points, and snared 15 rebounds to control the boards. Paul Vickers was high man for the Wildcats with 12 points.

The Tamalpais win moved the Indians one half game ahead of Marin Catholic, but the Wildcats have only one more contest remaining while Tam has two to play.

DRAKE WINS

In other league games, Drake kept Novato in the celler with a 35-31 win. Little Wayne Onizuka connected for 21 points with 8 for 13 and Don Alvaraldo grabbed 11 rebounds. Frank Perachiotti was high for Novato with 17 points.

San Rafael moved into a fourth place tie with Redwood with a 62-45 victory. The Bulldogs' Rodger Widmer hit for 20 while Andre Horn's 18 led the Giants. San Rafael broke open the contest with 42 points in the last two quarters to only 15 for Redwood.

Other scores received:

Drake JV 35, Novato JV 31

Tamalpais JV 46, Marin Catholic JV 33

Marin Catholic Frosh 44, Tamalpais Frosh 37

MARIN KEG TOURNAMENT TO START

The Marin County men's championship boxing tourney gets underway this evening and will continue tomorrow and next weekend.

Singles and doubles competition will be held at Nave Lanes, with the team event slated for Greenbrae Lanes. Action will begin today at 7 p.m. at both bowling establishments.

Padres Host Stockton Hot Shots

The San Rafael Padres of the Western Professional Bowling League will be trying to snap the four-game winning streak of the Stockton 300's tomorrow when the two teams meet at Country Bowl in San Rafael, 6 p.m.

In the first half of the season, the Pads halted Stockton's six-game victory streak, so they'll be trying to duplicate that feat. San Rafael is tied for third in the second half standings with 3 wins and 3 losses. Stockton is in second place with a 4-2 mark.

Three Marin Boxers Win Gold Gloves

Dave Townsel Jr. of San Rafael and James Byrd and Osmar Alaniz of Hamilton Air Force Base won championships last night in the finals of the Golden Gloves boxing tournament in San Francisco, but three other Hamilton AFB finalists met defeat in the bouts at Kezar Pavilion.

Results of bouts involving Marin fighters:

Senior Class

119 pounds—Alaniz TKO'd Felix Garcia, Stockton.

Novice Class

Golf Exhibition At Peacock Gap

The public is invited to watch, and participate in, a Washington's Birthday golf exhibition at Peacock Gap Country Club in San Rafael, Monday, beginning at 3 p.m.

Three events are planned, and prizes will be given, according to Peacock Gap officials. Events include:

1. A driving contest, with a trophy going to Marin County's "longest hitter."

2. A golf clinic, conducted by Peacock Gap pro Bob Finn and his staff, featuring Bobby Lunn, former U.S. Public Links champion.

3. A hole-in-one contest to benefit the St. Vincent's School for Boys in San Rafael.

that Weed-Redding trip behind them and two of their remaining three games are at home. Santa Rosa Coach Glen Albaugh smiled, "If there's an edge in the schedule, I guess we have it. But our final game is at Sierra — that's tough."

Should the Tars and Bear Cubs win their remaining games and tie for the Golden Valley Conference title with 11-1 records, they'll have to meet on a neutral court for a berth in the State J.C. Tournament of Champs at San Mateo March 11-12-13. Last year Santa Rosa beat Marin in an identical playoff situation. Maybe the script writer has a happier ending in the 1965 chapter.

LAST NIGHT Albaugh said his Bear Cubs played their best game of the season and observed that the Tars "shot poorly."

He added, "Our game plan was to control (guard Jay) Johnson in the open court to stop their fast break. We did a pretty good job of it. Also, our defense adjusted to their one-four weave offense after about five minutes and contained them pretty well."

Riemcke said the Bear Cubs' two big boys — Mike Francis and Tom Stewart, each 6-6 and about 225 — did the most damage to the Tars. Albaugh had special praise for Francis, saying, "He did a great job under the defensive backboards in the final 10 minutes of the game." Stewart rolled up 30 points and was just a general nuisance for Marin.

THE VISITING coach noted Marin was hurt when 6-7 Fred Arnold fouled out with 10 minutes left to play and the Tars trailing by 58-67. "His loss hurt their rebounding," said Albaugh.

Marin's 73 - point total last night was its third lowest offensive output of the season. On Dec. 2 the Tars lost to San Mateo, 64-66, and on Dec. 17 they beat Shasta, 70-63. In conference their average was 97 points a game — until last night.

Santa Rosa Too Much For Marin

fense to make it a rout. Led by Stewart, they outscored Marin 11-2 in a three-minute burst for a 61-50 edge and never looked back.

In a losing cause, Monti and Johnson looked good. Monti wound up with 18 points—hitting 8 for 24 from the floor. Johnson was under terrific pressure as Santa Rosa keyed its offense on him. As a result he hit only five fielders, but fattened his game total to 24 by hitting all 14 of his free throws.

Brody came in with 14 points, 10 of which came in the final 13 minutes when Marin was pretty much out of it.

The crowd of 1,700 was the largest ever assembled in Marin's new gymnasium. "It's really a beautiful gym—we like it very much," smiled Santa Rosa coach Albaugh.

Army Says Copter Site Coincidence

The Army emphasized today that it is not in the business of of delivering non-commissioned officers to their homes by helicopter.

"It was pure coincidence," an Army spokesman said, that a passenger in a Fort Scott helicopter which landed on the Olive School playground in Novato Thursday lived only a block away from school.

The helicopter landed in the school yard after it hit a seagull and the pilot, CWO Robert A. Baney, wanted to inspect the craft for damage.

Sixth grade teacher Donald E. White said he prevented about 100 school children from rushing toward the craft's whirling blades.

A.F. Personnel Given Awards

A sergeant and a colonel at Hamilton Air Force Base have each received $50 and the George Washington Honor Medal Award from the Freedoms Foundation.

Winners are Chief Master Sgt. Donald E. Lauritsen of 22 Selfridge Way and Col. Carlton J. Martin of 217 Sunset Drive.

The awards were given for their entries in the armed forces letter program on the topic "My Vote Freedom's Privilege."

Peace Corps Member Is Killed In Caracas

CARACAS, Venezuela (AP) — A U.S. Peace Corps member was killed and another was shot in the stomach by police last night as their vehicle passed a police station.

Police, who had been clashing with students in connection with a Communist-led taxi strike, assumed the vehicle was carrying terrorists and shot out the rear tires.

Joseph R. Rupley, 24, the driver, got out of the car with his hands up and was shot through the heart, the U.S. Embassy said.

A fellow corpsman, David Glover, 25, was shot in the stomach when he too came out with his hands up.

Corpsman Ronald Bean and Donald Carluccio, in the back seat of the vehicle, proved their identities. Police then took the victims to a hospital, where authorities said Glover probably will survive.

In the clashes with police, one student was killed and 12 were wounded.

Lights Smashed

Foreman Fred Rogers of the Cunningham Construction Co., Oakdale, Stanislaus County, complained to Marin County Sheriff's Office this week that about 22 flashing warning lights, owned by the Flasher Co., Napa, have been smashed at three construction sites in the county. The flashers, mounted on saw horses, were hit with rocks, he said.

Couple Honored At Greenbrae Party

By MOLLY MARIN

The E. Shelby Garwoods of Greenbrae entertained 40 friends at a cocktail party in their home Sunday honoring their daughter, Judith, and her fiance, Jack Clark of Sausalito. The couple plan to marry on May 15.

A NUMBER of Marin parents whose daughters are attending Wellesley College will be in San Francisco on Wednesday evening for dinner in conjunction with the school alumnae council meeting. Attending Wellesley are Brownwyn Hughes of Kentfield; Pauline Livermore of San Rafael and Kathleen Winslow of Tiburon.

MARION HIRSCHHORN, a candidate for queen of the Mardi Gras sponsored by the Little Jim Club of Children's Hospital of San Francisco, will be honored at a luncheon on March 1 at the Oak View Club at The Meadows in Terra Linda by Mesdames Henry Shapiro, Jerry Hoyt and Herbert H. Samuels.

MRS. FRED B. Craddock of Peacock Gap, recently has returned home after a trip to Houston, Tex., and Vinita, Okla.

MRS. TOBY E. Vickers of Novato has returned home after a trip to Abilene, Tex.

MR. AND MRS. Lloyd Amos of Sydney, Australia, are house guests of the Harry Flachs at their Marin Country Club Estates home. Mr. and Mrs. Amos, former residents of the Country Club Estates, entertained Mr. and Mrs. Walker Geddes, also of the Estates, at their home in Sydney just prior to coming to Marin. The Geddes' are on a world tour.

THE EUGENE Latapies of San Rafael will be among those who will trek to El Cerrito for the Elm Branch of the Children's Hospital of the East Bay "Terrific Twenties" dinner dance Feb. 27.

Auxiliary Names Neophytes

Initiating the new volunteers into the program of the Social Service Auxiliary of Marin will be the champagne tea Wednesday from 2 to 4 p.m. at the home of Mrs. Louis Pometta in Ross.

The auxiliary was established in 1941 to assist Catholic Social Service in Marin County.

In addition to these efforts, however, year-round service is provided through its motor corps, Marian Visiting group, Christmas giving project, library assistance and daily clerical staff. It also includes a number of chapters which are fund-raising as well as social such as bridge groups, dominoes, golf, sewing, a working women's group, boutique, luncheon group, miscellaneous and Southern Marin.

New members to be welcomed are mesdames Orel A. Pierson, Albert P. Tognoli, Charles Drolla, Albert J. Weber, Samuel L. Wright Jr., James Burke, Martin H. O'Brien Jr., Lou Bernadoni, John W. Merryman, William P. Guiremand, P. J. Doyle, Vern C. Stanford, Fred Lancelotti.

The Rev. John O'Connor, moderator of the Auxiliary and Marin County director of the agency, Miss Margaret Frings, executive secretary of the agency, and Mrs. Edward Ravizza, Auxiliary president, assisted by board members and chapter chairmen will greet the guests Wednesday.

Mrs. Richard Jackson is chairman of the tea, assisted by co-chairman Mrs. Roy Pasqualetti and a committee including Mesdames Fred Adams, Roger Yore, Arthur V. Fay, Fred Acciari, Vincent J. Sullivan, William Trewartha, Alfred M. Garcia and Cletus Fitzharris.

Wine Tasting Set For French Class

Members of the Mill Valley Outdoor Art Club French Classes will attend a French wine tasting and exhibition of Batiks by Margaret Cornelius on Feb. 28 at L'Orangerie in San Francisco.

The event has been arranged by Mrs. Pierre Dupart, teacher of the classes.

Jewish Center Plans Sessions On Decorating, Expert Cuisine

Three varied programs will be offered by the Marin Jewish Community Center in San Rafael with sessions scheduled in "Expert International Cuisine," "Decorator Know How" and "The Nursery Age — A Positive Approach."

Six sessions will comprise the "Expert International Cuisine" to be held on Mondays from 9:30 to 11:30 a.m. at the Center. Butcher Buying will be featured at the March 1 meeting and ensuing sessions include Cake Decor, March 8; Candy Making, March 15; Ice Cream Fancies, Mach 22; Hors d'Oeuvres, March 29 and Marketing, April 5.

"DECORATOR Know How" sessions will be held on Tuesday afternoons from 12:45 to 2:45 p.m. at the Center. The six sessions will begin with Furniture Know How on March 2; Window Treatments, March 9; Carpets and Floors, March 16; Decorator Tips, March 23; Art in the Home, March 30 and Antiques, April 6.

THE FOUR psychology lecture discussions on "The Nursery Age — A Positive Approach" will be held on the fourth Thursday of each month from 8:15 to 10 p.m. at the Center. The Feb. 25 speaker will be Dr. Isaac Silberman, psychiatrist, whose topic will be "Teaching Lasting Values." Dr. Jack Preissinger will speak on "Push or Pull" on March 25. Lois Jensen, teacher at West End School, will speak on "Creativity and Learning in the Home" on April 22 and the series will conclude on May 27 with "Problems In Perspective" by the Marin Mental Health Assn.

Newlyweds Are Living In Berkeley

Newlywed Mr. and Mrs. Victor Engleman are living in Berkeley following a Lake Tahoe wedding trip. The bride, the former Louise McFarlane wore a white wool dress for the ceremony, which was held at San Rafael home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. James W. McFarlane. The Rev. Howard Matson officiated.

The bride's only attendant was her sister, Lynne McFarlane, who wore a lime wool dress. David Kauffman of Inglewood was best man. A reception followed at the home of the bride's parents.

The bride is attending the University of California School of Nursing and will be graduated in June.

The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Engleman of Oakland. He attended high school in New York and was graduated from California Institute of Technology. He is now working toward a Ph. D degree in chemical engineering at University of California.

W. F. Boehm Claims Bride In Home Rite

Mrs. Marjorie G. Bolton of Terra Linda and Werner F. Boehm of San Rafael exchanged wedding vows yesterday at the bride's home, the Rev. James Upshaw of Christ Presbyterian Church in Terra Linda officiating.

Immediate family members only attended the ceremony, for which the bride was attended by her two daughters, Marti Bolton and Mrs. John L. Cooley of San Rafael. The bride's son-in-law, John Cooley, was best man.

The bride, who is the widow of Thomas M. Bolton, is employed with the Marin County School Superintendent's office at the Civic Center. Mrs. Tom Sandoz of Astoria, Ore., is her sister.

The bridegroom, who is employed with Standard Oil Co. of California, formerly lived in Germany and has lived in Marin for nine years.

THE BETTER HALF By Bob Barnes

"You failed to mention that those hordes of attractive native girls are preoccupied day and night with hordes of attractive native men!"

St. Margaret's Bridge Friday

St. Margaret's Guild of Christ Church in Sausalito will sponsor a bridge-luncheon Friday to be held at 12:30 p.m. in Campbell Hall.

Proceeds will go into the general fund of the church.

Curley Hair Back

Curly hair will stage a comeback if Paris hair stylists have their way. Mannequins in the spring couture fashion shows wore all sorts of curled locks. Carita advanced the "angelot" —short hair curled and brushed high. Alexandre went for "mad curls" — framing the face in apparent disarray.

Removes Fruit Stains

A strong solution of borax will remove most fruit stains from washable items.

SEW SIMPLE

Crepe Is Not Best Long Coat Lining

By EUNICE FARMER

This past fall I lined a winter coat in rayon crepe. Since it was so narrow and straight, I did as you suggested and fastened the lining to the lower edge of the coat as I do with my suits. I haven't worn the coat for several weeks and now the lining hangs limp and droopy. What did I do wrong?

Mrs. S. H.

Dear Mrs. S. H.:

Crepe is the one kind of lining fabric that stretches as it hangs. It is not the best lining possible for a full length coat; I suggest you use lightweight taffeta or a dull satin. Both of these have a little extra body necessary for a coat.

To remedy the lining in your coat, remove the stitches across the back of the coat, between each side seam. Hem this section separately and allow it to hang free of the coat. To keep it from flying away from the coat, you may use a long bartack between the center back of the lining and the center back of your coat.

The new crease-resistant fabrics are so fabulous in so many ways, but why do they have to have a crease in them that won't come out. What can I do with this ugly crease right down the center front of my dress?

Mrs. W.W.H.

Dear Mrs. W.W.H.:

It seems there are always disadvantages to the so-called advantages. Once a crease sets in this crease-resistant fabric, it's almost always there for life. Dampen a press cloth and try to press it out on the wrong side. Try a little diluted white vinegar on the crease before pressing.

Once again, may I repeat a preventive measure. Refold your fabric wherever possible to avoid this center crease. Usually this type of fabric is 45 inches wide, or wider, and each half can be folded separately so that the center front and center back will not coincide with the original crease.

JUST A WORD to acknowledge the many letters I did receive from you concerning men's patterns. Your letters were sincere and informative, bringing the problems of fitting and style to the point. I must have many more letters from you before anyone will listen to us. If you have tried sewing for the men in your life and been unhappy with the patterns, write me a card or letter at once. Please write to Eunice Farmer, in care of this paper. Each and every letter is important. I need your help in my newest crusade.

I have purchased one-fourth of a skin of leather to use as trimming for a suit after reading your excellent suggestion. However, I don't remember what you said about the grain of the leather and what direction it should be cut.

Mrs. L.J.

Dear Mrs. L.J.:

Leather has no definite grain so any direction may be used. You will find that some sections of the leather are much heavier than the rest, this would be the neck and tail section of the skin. Leather can be cut with regular scissors and stitched on your sewing machine. Use the scraps and practice before you begin on your finished product.

Doctor Describes Life In Thailand

Marin County was mentioned in describing life in Thailand, by Dr. Harriet B. Hanson when she spoke at the United Presbyterian Women of Novato luncheon meeting Wednesday.

Dr. Hanson, a pediatrician, and her husband, Dr. John Harold Hanson, a surgeon, are both on leave from McCormick Hospital in Chiengmai, in northern Thailand.

Dr. Hanson said that Taylor Potter, an American missionary architect, formerly of San Anselmo, designed the new two story pediatric building in Chiengmai which will be completed in June.

She showed slides during her talk, and among them was a picture of croup tents being used by the children which had been given to the Hansons by children of the daily vacation Bible school at Hamilton Air Force Base.

"WE DO NOT have open fear of Communists in the north now, but they do have some jungle training camps," said Dr. Hanson in reference to the government. "It is against the law to be a Communist in Thailand and a person can be shot if one possesses Communist literature," she said.

"We are proud of what the American government has done in Thailand," she said. Among the many things she mentioned were the roads and thousands of bridges, the sewer system in Bangkok and mosquito control program to help eradicate malaria.

DR. HANSON said Thailand is just now emerging like the United States did 200 years ago. The country's main crop is rice. (However, the people not interested in agriculture are being urged to become interested in handicrafts as an export item.)

DESCRIBING the hospital and patients she said that for the 200 patients in the hospital they have only eight charcoal burners to do all the cooking, with the exception of two small charcoal burners to cook the rice.

Anyone is eligible to make use of the hospital facilities, Dr. Hanson said, and when a youngster is admitted to the pediatrics ward, the parents also stay in the hospital and sleep on mats under the bed. She said the parents provide a major part of the nursing care.

Seventeen per cent of the patients are charity cases, Dr. Hanson said, but the fee for prenatal care, delivery and post natal care are about $12 in American money, which is almost prohibitive for most of the patients.

"OUR BIG JOB is to teach the Thai doctors what we have learned as specialists and teachers and help them help themselves," Dr. Hanson said.

The Hansons plan to return to Thailand in June. They are sponsored by the United Presbyterian Church.

2nd Crossing Proponents Must Ultimately Triumph

YOU HEAR IT SAID with increasing frequency that traffic on the Golden Gate Bridge is approaching capacity.

This is true to a degree. For a couple of hours in the morning and a couple of hours in the evening on five days a week, it is nearing capacity.

During the other 148 hours of the week it is quite adequate.

IF ONLY THERE WERE some way to spread out the traffic, the present bridge would be sufficient to carry the load for the rest of the lives of all of us now living.

But such a development is unlikely. So we are faced with the necessity of meeting the impending crisis.

When you analyze the movement of people to and fro you come inevitably to the conclusion that rapid transit is the only answer.

We of Marin embarked on that course a few years ago with the Bay Area Rapid Transit District. For awhile it looked like our problems were moving toward solution. We envisioned streamlined trains moving swiftly over rails elevated above surface congestion. They swept across the Golden Gate bridge and disappeared into subways to reach downtown San Francisco swiftly.

But that dream bubble burst with the finding that the Golden Bridge was unsuited to carrying trains.

SEVERAL YEARS AGO we had several serious moves toward fixing a location for a new "second crossing" bridge. The route most frequently envisioned would extend from the tip of the Tiburon peninsula, pass over Angel Island and reach San Francisco in full view of Russian Hill dwellers.

More than one plan of this nature was shot down by Tiburon peninsula residents and/or Russian Hill residents.

WHY NOT SEND SOME rapid transit trains across the Richmond-San Rafael bridge and feed them into the Bay Area Rapid Transit system in the East Bay from whence they could move easily to downtown San Francisco?

We gave this some study, too. It hit dead end with the finding by engineers that the San Rafael-Richmond bridge —like the Golden Gate bridge—wasn't designed to carry trains safely.

WHAT DO WE DO now?

There have been suggestions that private automobile commute tolls be raised sharply to encourage commuters to use buses.

Marin County Transit District flirts with the idea of somehow making bus travel more attractive to commuters than their private autos.

It is hard to see how either of these approaches could succeed in achieving their stated aims.

WHAT, THEN, IS the answer?

More and more people are saying, "Build a second crossing and make sure it is designed to carry commute trains as well as highway traffic."

This has to be the answer.

Directors of the Golden Gate Bridge and Highway District are among the most acutely aware of the impending crisis.

They have indicated a willingness to appropriate funds toward further study of a second crossing. Senator McAteer of San Francisco has a bill in the Senate which, if passed, would make such action by the Bridge Board legal.

The Marin County Board of Supervisors has approved this course of action as have some of the boards of other Bridge District counties.

The San Rafael Chamber of Commerce and the Marin County Development Assn. have adopted resolutions recognizing the need to get started on plans for a second crossing. Other chambers of commerce in Marin presumably will be following suit in the days ahead.

So there is emerging, at last, some support for action.

UP TILL NOW IT seemed that the only outspoken partisans were those against one particular site or another.

Whatever site is ultimately chosen will be bitterly opposed by some.

(One wag recently suggested a bridge without approaches so as to avoid opposition from those areas where it might be anchored.)

In the end, this opposition must be overcome, just as powerful opposition to the Golden Gate bridge was overcome more than a quarter of a century ago and strong opposition was overcome in order to begin the San Rafael-Richmond bridge more than a decade ago.

Bully for those who are coming to realize the increasing need for a second crossing and are commencing to "go to bat" for it.

Bouquets And (No) Brickbats

A BOUQUET to Marin Medical Society for playing a big role in the American Medical Society's Eldercare proposal. Key features of the Marin Medical Plan, introduced about seven years ago, are included in AMA's proposed substitute for Medicare.

A BOUQUET to Mr. and Mrs. E. Vernon Ward of Mill Valley on their golden wedding anniversary. Both worked for many years in the Marin County sheriff's office.

A BOUQUET to Terra Linda High School student body president Bonnie Brown, named district winner of the Elks Lodgs leadership competition.

BOUQUETS to Lavon Kieffer of Tomales High, Laura Gavre of Drake High, Joan Taylor of Tamalpais, and Joan Troppmann of Redwood for winning the annual Good Citizens awards from the Daughters of the American Revolution.

A BOUQUET to the National Park Service for opening up Point Reyes Beach to the public. It will be a little preview of what we can expect in the vast new Point Reyes National Seashore Park.

A BOUQUET to the Novato City Council for pioneering in the field of underground utilities in new subdivisions.

GREAT WEALTH IN THE OCEAN

Vast treasures of oil, diamonds, gold, tin, nickel, cobalt and other materials are hidden in the oceans of the world.

While mining gold is still too expensive, diamonds are being retrieved off the West Coast of South Africa. Moreover, a fortune in tin lies under the Gulf of Siam and large oil reserves exist under deep water beyond the continental shelves in several regions.

Some of the metals lie on the ocean floor in sizes ranging from that of a potato to three feet in diameter. Others are suspended in mid-ocean.

Needed to mine them, according to experts, are better equipment and, especially, skilled personnel to handle instruments, organize information, direct programs and think creatively about this enormous area of the earth's surface.

God is not wanting in generosity to the needs of mankind. But, He expects man to work patiently and hard to uncover the good things He has provided.

"Bear fruit in patience." (Luke 8:15)

Help me show initiative, O Lord, in making the best use of the resources You put at the disposal of all.

World Government Could End Crisis?

Editor, Independent-Journal:

The growing crisis in Viet Nam bears a basic similarity to other crises in the recent past. . . . Each crisis springs from the lack of a world-wide system of enforceable law.

Disputes between men as individuals and between the nations of men are inevitable. It is foolish to wait and hope for the utopian day when disputes cease to be a part of the affairs of men. If such foolish hopes form our only answer, it is doubtful that the human race will long survive the atomic age. Sooner or later disputes are settled either by the force of law or by the law of force. Until we achieve a workable system of enforceable law on a world-wide basis we can expect the long and frightening series of crises to continue. . . .

Effective world law can come only from an effective world organization, a greatly strengthened United Nations. . . . We have not yet recognized that it will take more than good wishes for the U. N. to fulfill its role of keeping the peace. It will take a strengthened structure, a revitalized organization; in effect, it will take a transformation into a world government. Nothing less can do the job and the need for this job becomes more apparent and more crucial every day.

World government is inevitable sooner or later. Either it will be a limited world government such as the World Federalists have been proposing or, heaven forbid, a totalitarian world government. Either it will come before a holocaust, or it will come after. It is high time we face the issue and make a choice; a choice regarding our basic approach to foreign policy. Shall we continue to drift from crisis to crisis without striving for a fundamental solution? Or shall we shape our course toward an over-riding goal: effective world law? Let us strive to keep the world safe for diversity.

Post Office Red Ink Laid To Inefficiency

Editor, Independent-Journal:

I, who am a former resident of Long Island, New York, am beginning to get a little weary of our Postmaster General in Washington, D. C.—telling the nation that the Post Office Department is running in the red. —Where does the money go? Not to the two-footed stalwarts who deliver the mail!

Today, I received a letter mailed in New York, Feb. 2. Took two weeks to get here. Three days by train from New York to California, and five hours by plane, and now you, Mr. Postmaster General, want to increase postal rates.

Please do some housecleaning.

Send Communists Out Of Country

Editor, Independent-Journal:

Rip Van Winkle slept for 100 years. How much longer will we, the American people, sleep? I cannot help but ask this question in view of recent events relating to our famous and meaningful monuments which came within a hairsbreadth of being blown off the face of the earth—by the Communists.

So many educators, sociologists, pseudo-intellectuals and, of course, our demonstrators for freedom—freedom to loaf —seem to feel that we should allow the Communists full rein to inject their venom into the bloodstreams of our youngsters, just as Hitler did. This is what is known as showing both sides of the picture. There is only one flaw, however. These educators don't say anything about this subject being taught by a person who can most easily show the pitfalls of communism. Rather, we have the Limas lecturing on the beauties of their society and none of the atrocities. More crimes have been committed in the name of communism and peace than were ever committed in the name of Nazism and hate, only it is a well-kept secret. They even write it out of their own history books. This is Communist truth! . . .

I would sooner live in poverty in this country and have freedom from fear and, yes, the freedom to write this letter than live behind the Iron Curtain in some "happy" little commune. Wouldn't you? Let us give the people that hate this land of ours a one-way ticket to the Communist country of their choice and let us get on with the business of being good citizens and good Americans.

Courts Criticized As Being Unjust

Editor, Independent-Journal:

I wish to congratulate Mrs. H. J. Dauphinee of San Rafael on her editorial Feb. 16, 1965. I agree "hog-wash." Eagles are much more important than a human being — life means nothing. Our very brilliant defense attorneys will fight to free a guilty person even though he knows him to be guilty. My impression of our laws, a fair and just trial, but not what goes on in our courts. Why do we waste the time and wages on our juries (wages they lose from their positions) when they bring in a guilty verdict, the judge does as he pleases anyway. What justice?

Our California Highway Patrol officers are going to be given shotguns. If they are forced to use them, they will be called murderers; they are not supposed to defend themselves. Is it any wonder that they, too, are resigning with disgust because when a guilty person is brought in, they are free again to commit a more serious crime. If every person wrote in their criticism of our courts, your paper would have no space for news.

Pigeon Proposed As National Bird

Editor, Independent-Journal:

I am still wondering why a people, who can spend 20 million dollars a year on a conglomeration of pets both cats and dogs for the fun of it, balk at spending 10 dollars on a meal ticket to a flock of eagles to assure a successful journey to their winter quarters in Mexico. . . .

Come to think of it, I should think a pigeon would be more appropriate as a representative of our nation.

I-J REPORTER'S NOTEBOOK

Marin's 'Silent' Voters Gave Supervisors Mandate To Govern

MORE POLITICAL campaigns have been won by sharp slogans than by platforms, however well carpentered.

The candidate may be a dreary nobody, his party may be mired in greed, his cause may be a mess of mush, but let some faceless flack generate a catchy slogan and Katie-bar-the-door!

We more and more suspect that not only political wars but the very wheels of government are easier to guide by slogan than by any deep thought.

The slogans are not always a simple collection of words, but rather a verbal shorthand for a whole collection of ideas. Perhaps this reflects Americans' love for the streamlined, the quick-and-easy, the reading of the headlines and skipping all that fine print.

WE SPOTTED some sterling examples of sloganry at a hearing the other night of protests against the supervisorial redistricting plan that the Marin County Board of Supervisors installed last Dec. 1.

"One man, one vote."

"Community of interests."

"Nowadays, we don't represent rural or urban districts, we represent all the people."

"We don't represent maps, we represent people."

"County charter . . ."

"Clear mandate of the courts . . ."

"The law is the law and the courts have interpreted it to us . . ."

These pothooks and squiggles standing for governmental ideas are not necessarily wrong in themselves. The trouble is that they tend to squeeze some very large concepts into neat, small packages, decorated by the motivational-research experts. All sight of the complexities and the realities the slogans represent vanishes.

ONE BASIC philosophical warning is that "the symbol is not the thing." No map of Marin County is Marin County. No supervisorial district is all the people.

Because no one is omniscient, we all find it easier to grasp and push around the symbols — the more simplified the more liked—than it is to understand all the complexities of governing and being governed.

What could easily be the seed of a slogan-idea was uttered by Board Chairman Peter H. Behr as the evening wore on. Looking out over the almost non-existent audience, he declared:

"The people who really scare me . . . are the people who sit silently at home. They have only a little knowledge, but when their ox is gored they come in and scream. . . . These are the persons who really are the traitors to our democratic form of government."

Now, we are going to act as the Devil's advocate — well remembering a column under our name last year, praising Marin residents for being more interested in their government than other Bay Area counties' citizens.

What we urge Supervisor Behr not to forget is that those "silent" voters gave him a mandate to govern for them without their having to spend every minute watching him.

One East Bay supervisor we knew practically was unable to decide on a rural road's name without a district plebiscite. Barely in time, he learned he was being paid to represent his electorate, not just poll them. Folks quickly tired of unending public meetings on every subject he couldn't decide.

At the Marin County redistricting hearing the other night, the county officials and the press outnumbered the audience. We decided that, after all, it was those whose "ox had been gored" that were there, and this was as it should be.

We later talked with one of the original redistricting critics, who was absent from the hearing. He backed our hypothesis.

"We're waiting to see how it works out," he said. "We had our say earlier. If the board's plan doesn't work, we'll then ask for a change, or try to get some new supervisors."

BARKER ON CHINA

Chinese Is 'Some Different Noise'

By GEORGE BARKER

THE WORD FOR match in Chinese means "fire-baby" and that for cigarette means "smoke-baby." When a Chinese smokes, he "eats smoke." These are just a few of the quaint and colorful expressions of the Chinese as they translate into English.

One day I returned to our cheap Hong Kong hotel room to find my Chinese wife trying to beat a black catfish to death. As every fisherman knows, catfish die hard. When you say fresh fish in Hong Kong, you mean alive. None of this modern refrigeration jazz. She told me the catfish was a "lo yan yu," which means "old man fish."

ENGLISH HAS crept into the Cantonese vernacular in Hong Kong. "Kau" means "play." The sporty boys call each other "kau-boy" or "cowboy." And,of course, the ladies of the night are called "cow-girls."

America is "Mei Kuo" or "Mei Gwok," which means "Beautiful Country." California is "Lo Gum Shan" or "Old Gold Mountain." Australia is "New Gold Mountain."

THE CHINESE are quite given to nicknames. Most have at least a couple. This makes for delightful confusion at the American Consulate, where consular officials try to screen refugees and have to cope with strings of aliases. Some of these nicknames are quite attractive and descriptive. For example, a tiny young lady, who was very beautiful and graceful, was called "Siu Ying" or "Small Swallow." Others are just descriptive, such as "Fei Po" or "Fat Grandmother."

Chinese is a great language to pun with. Because it is monosylabic the same word has a number of different meanings, depending on tone and inflection, which means that the beginner is bound to make an ass of himself. There are 10 distinct tones and inflections in Cantonese; fewer in Mandarin.

MY HOUSEBOY, Ah Lee, expressed it perfectly when he said, "Chinese and English is some different noise." Take the Cantonese word for "I," as an example. It resembles a goose honking. It is supposedly rendered phonetically as "Ngon." But "Ngon" doesn't give any idea of the nasal quality or the fact that both N's are almost silent; almost, but not quite. It just can't be rendered into the Latin alphabet. There are several systems that try, but Chinese is still "some different noise."

America The Beautiful? Nation Has Trampled Look

NIGHTMARISH DISPLAY—This is what greets the visitor's eye at Camden, N.J. The signs attract the eye, but how effective are they? Is one enticed into entering the stores, or is one repulsed by ugliness?

Rusted Autos, Stunted Trees Greet Visitors

By LOWRY BOWMAN

WASHINGTON (UPI)—Interior Secretary Stewart Udall wrote in his book, "The Quiet Crisis", that "We cannot afford an America where expedience tramples upon esthetics, and development decisions are made with an eye only on the present."

But looking at the U.S. countryside from a bus window can give the impression that Udall's warning may be too late. Here are some personal notes from a 28-state bus and train tour last September:

The train to New York moved off into a vast rusting ugliness of automobile corpses, raw earth, stunted trees and all the slagheaps of living. Washington, Baltimore, Philadelphia, Newark and New York are linked by a common bond of unbelievable ugliness. There is an occasional attractive building along this route. They are so unusual, though, that each one looks like nothing so much as a swan standing in a sump pit.

"For purple mountain majesties, above the fruited plain."

Oregon's Willamette Valley with the Cascade Mountains on one side seems intensely rich. But there's smoke everywhere. Most of the fields have been deliberately burned to get rid of weeds. The mountains have been so heavily logged that they all have a mangy look when you get too close.

"America, America, God shed His grace on thee, and crown thee good with brotherhood, from sea to shining sea."

The Town Brook in Plymouth still runs clear. But the thing I'll always remember about that famous Plymouth Rock is the neo-Grecian temple that covers it and three blue flash bulbs from a tourist's camera on the sand beside it.

"O beautiful for pilgrim feet, whose stern impassioned stress. A thoroughfare off freedom beat, across the wilderness."

One note about the Great Plains. The pioneers found their way West just by following old Buffalo bones. We could follow the rusted carcasses of dead automobiles and reach the same destination.

America, America, God mend thine every flaw. Confirm thy soul in self control, they liberty in law."

We went out of Chicago through the Cicero section on Route 66. How do people survive as people in such filth? Red and green neon on the garbage doesn't improve it. Every store window is protected by steel bars or steel shutters. What does the constant sight of that do to the souls of those who live here? They must know unconsciously that they are not trusted. So how can they trust?

There really is no way to anticipate the sense of awe that fills any traveler when he first sees the giant Redwood trees along Highway 101 in northern California.

But some enterprising businessman has tried to cushion this too-sudden sense of grandeur. He hid the gigantic base of one tree with a sign almost equally gigantic: "See the amazing magic trees!"

The traveler whose eyes have tired of the greys and browns of the American southwest is relieved by the soft green of easteren Texas. But he is brought up snort at Gladewater, Tex., by the sight of black oil derricks interspersed among the tombstones in a little churchyard cemetery.

In a speech at San Francisco two years ago, Udall asked his audience: "What will happen to the quality of life as we approach the point where the available natural areas of the continent offer standing room only?"

The roots of man, Udall said, "are in the natural world, and he separates himself from it at his peril."

Udall referred to Henry David Thoreau who retired to Walden Pond just 120 years ago for the solitude in which he could "front only the essential facts of life and see if I could not learn what it had to teach —and not, when I came to die, discover that I had not lived."

Thoreau walked "along the stony shore of the pond" and had to search for "bent twigs or grass, or the print of their shoes" to tell if others had walked that way.

Today, Walden Pond is a public bathing beach with benches to accommodate those who visit. Sand has been trucked in to cover the mud.

"As a culture develops," Udall said in his San Francisco speech, "wilderness is the last resource to acquire value ... and the first to be consumed."

Population Centers Bring Own Problems Of Pollution

By W. JOYNES MacFARLAN

WASHINGTON (AP) — Every American city with over 100,000 population has an air pollution problem of some kind.

That's the word from a public health service spokesman summarizing the background behind President Lyndon B. Johnson's call for controls to prevent air and water pollution before it happens.

Concentrations of population also are resulting in pollution of thousands of miles of streams and coastal waters, it was pointed out.

On the water pollution side, the federal government already has moved in 21 cases to try to bring about abatement of pollution which has been found to be a public health hazard. Other areas are under study.

The abatement procedures launched under a 1961 law deal with portions of streams or other water areas as follows:

Raritan Bay, off New Jersey and New York; the North Platte River in Nebraska and Wyoming; Puget Sound and the upper Columbia River in Washington state; the Mississippi River in the area of Clinton, Iowa, involving both Illinois and Iowa; the Detroit River in Michigan; the Androscoggin River in New Hampshire and Maine; the Escambia River in Alabama and Florida.

The Coosa River in Alabama and Georgia; the Pearl River in Louisiana and Mississippi; the South Platte River in Colorado; the Menonminee River in Michigan and Wisconsin.

The Connecticut River in Massachusetts and Connecticut; the Monongahela River in West Virginia, Pennsylvania and Maryland; the Snake River in the Lewiston-Clarkston area in Idaho and Washington; the upper Mississippi River in Minnesota and Wisconsin.

The Merrimack and Nashua Rivers in New Hampshire and Massachusetts; the lower Mississippi River in Louisiana, Mississippi, Tennessee and Arkansas; the Blackstone River in Massachusetts and Rhode Island; the Savannah River in Georgia and South Carolina; the Mahoning River in Pennsylvania and Ohio, and the Grand Calumet River in Indiana and Illinois.

There are no similar air pollution abatement cases pending, but the spokesman said you can call the roll of metropolitan centers and they all have a photochemical air pollution or smog problem.

Los Angeles has the best known situation, he said, but the volume of pollutants in smog in the Washington, D.C., area has at times rivaled the California area in ability to cause stinging eyes and other discomfort.

Oxidant concentrations in Washington, for example, were checked at adverse levels on July 1, 2, 7, 16, 17 and 31, 1964.

There were similar adverse conditions in Cincinnati, Chicago, Los Angeles, Philadelphia, St. Louis and San Francisco at times during the first six months of 1964.

Other areas listed with adverse conditions include Birmigham, Ala., Carlstadt, N.J., Denver, Detroit, Louisville, Minneapolis, Nashville, Phoenix, Tucson and Providence.

The spokesman said he situation is becoming increasingly serious along the entire Atlantic seaboard from Boston to Norfolk; along the lower Great Lakes from Chicago to Niagara; in the upper Ohio River Valley; in the Kansas cities bi-state area and in the St. Louis and East St. Louis areas.

John Birch Society Will Try To Double Membership In 1965

By JULES WITCOVER
Advance News Service

WASHINGTON — The John Birch Society is out to double its membership and its public-opinion and propaganda activities in 1965.

The goal is set in the society's February bulletin by Robert Welch, the Belmont, Mass., candy manufacturer who founded the nation's most controversial right-wing group.

The current membership figures is kept secret by the society. But Welch has been saying in recent monthly bulletins that the growth rate has been soaring. Last month, he talked about "tens of thousands of new members."

This month, Welch also is calling for a doubling of the society's library and bookstore outlets around the country and a doubling of circulation for its monthly magazine, "American Opinion."

At the start of 1965, according to Welch, about 225 bookstore units were in operation. No circulation figures are released on the magazine, which sells for $1 a month or $10 a year.

Though the November defeat of former Sen. Barry Goldwater has been widely considered to have dealt the far right a serious blow, The Birch Society has said the election awakened the listless in the ranks of potential members.

Welch reported last month that a "recruitment explosion" that started right after Goldwater's nomination at the Republican National Convention in July still was going on.

The Society, in its November bulletin, used the slogan: "Now will you join the John Birch Society?" In the January bulletin, Welch said the doubled membership in a year is a source of concern as well as encouragement to the organization, since new members may not be so well-grounded in the society's philosophy.

To help in their internal education, Welch in the latest bulletin pushes for wider distribution of the society's "recruitment packet," which contains basic materials and a membership application blank. The packet sells to members for a quarter.

Welch also makes an appeal for funds in the February bulletin. He says the Society's growth for the first time in eight months has exceeded revenue to finance it. The weekly payroll now is more than $25,000 and printing bills $85,000 a month, Welch says.

As in the past, a major objective of the Society continues to be the impeachment of the Chief Justice of the United States, Earl Warren.

Welch says in the latest bulletin that the Birch Society, which is establishing a Washington lobby, is attacking six national trends when it seeks Warren's impeachment.

Welch says the trends are destruction of the Constitution and conversion of the American republic into a democracy; use of civil rights by agitators to advance Communist objectives; injection of the federal government into religious matters; disintegration of states' rights; federal subsidization and control of education, and aid to subversives through permissive court decisions.

All-Around Science Skill Held Gaining In Red China

By Advance News Service

WASHINGTON — A British scientist who recently toured Red China reports Mao Tse-tung's government is doing far more scientifically than building atomic bombs.

Dr. C. H. Oldham of Hong Kong says that for the first time in history, the Chinese are combining theory and experiment in the tradition of the West in all fields of science. This is a sharp departure from the trial and error method of the past.

"I was impressed not so much by what has already been achieved — China is still a poor country — as by the solid educational foundation she is laying for future development," Oldham said in the journal, Science.

He said everything possible is being done to create a "scientific consciousness" among the people.

"Everywhere I went in both city and even commune, I noted a tremendous enthusiasm for science and innovation. Every commune had its own scientific plot, and two had their own research institutes."

Oldham visited four major universities, inspected laboratories and talked with a number of scientists. Formerly associated with an oil company as a geophysicist, Oldham said he was admitted to Red China alone and as a tourist last fall and remained there a month. He was accompanied by a Red Chinese guide.

Visits of western scientists to the Chinese mainland are rare. The last such appraisal was made by some westerners in 1962. They reported the Chinese were "surprisingly advanced" in electronics, solid state physics, and automation — all key specialties for an ICBM technology.

Oldham was at Nanking University last October when Red China exploded its first atom bomb. He said "the scientists there seemed in a particularly good humor and were obviously excited by the news."

In producing high grade U-235 for use in its bomb, Red China showed itself to be well advanced in atom technology. But it apparently hasn't stopped there.

At a Nanking agricultural mechanization research institute, Oldham was shown three new farm machines. One permitted a five-fold speed up in transplantation of rice seedlings; another sprayed insect-threatened crops by using irrigation water; the third was a cable plow for operation in swampy ground.

Factories are building electron microscopes, Oldham said, a feat the Czechs called impossible when they looked at Chinese facilities in 1958. In one year they built the same type of microscope the Czechs took three years to construct.

Boom In State's Legal Business Prompts New Appeal Court Plea

SACRAMENTO (CNS) — The legal business was booming in California last year, with 10,014,635 filings in the state's courts, an increase of about 700,000 from the year before.

The growth in court business, as reported by the administrative office of the courts, prompted the state's judicial council to ask the 1965 legislature to authorize a second division of the fourth district court of appeal, to be quartered in San Bernardino County.

The increase in court business also resulted in the council's asking the legislature to lift from judges the burden of making findings of fact and conclusions of law on all issues in every non-jury superior court trial. The council asked that the trial courts be permitted to make findings only as to particular issues which are specified by the parties to the litigation.

The biggest single cause for court cases, as might be expected, was traffic violation. There were 4,061,020 filings, other than parking cases, with the 255 judges of the municipal courts. Of this total, more than 3 million involved traffic violations, the remainder dealing with non-traffic misdemeanors, felony proceedings and civil cases.

Superior courts received 396,411 filings during 1964, of which 97,858 were divorce, separate maintenance or annulment cases.

The five district courts of appeal had 3,578 filings, while the state supreme court had 1,872 filings.

Another Viet Coup, Counter-Coup

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

Like a too-often-played Gilbert and Sullivan operetta, but with ominous overtones, another coup and counter-coup was staged on the streets of Saigon this week.

Names once foreign and exotic to American ears tugged at the lobes again: Lt. Gen. Nguyen Khanh, Tran Thien Khiem, Pham Ngoc Thao and Phan Huy Quat.

These were the principals in the drama that for the 12th time since the assassination of President Ngo Dinh Diem on Nov. 2, 1963, had a hand in the revolving-door governments of the embattled Southeast Asian country.

Apparently the plotter this time: Pham Ngoc Thao, a former foreign minister and of late a press officer in Washington of South Viet Nam Ambassador Tran Thien Khiem.

Backed by a small group of ever-dissident officers, Thao managed to make the tanks roll again. He pointed their muzzles at familiar targets: The post office, the airport, the radio station and the home of strongman Khanh.

The objective: Depose Khanh and install Khiem who had once ruled for a month in a previous anti-Khanh move.

Around The World Around The Clock

New York—The FBI arrested three Negro men and an attractive blonde Canadian woman and charged them with plotting to blow up the Statue of Liberty, the Liberty Bell and the Washington Monument.

Vatican City—A bomb exploded at a seldom-used entrance to the Vatican City, causing little damage but waking up the Italian capital. It was speculated the explosive was a protest over the banning of the controversial play "The Deputy."

Pasadena—America's Ranger 8 spacecraft took 7,500 television pictures of the moon within 23 minutes and then hit "home" in the "Sea of Tranquility" to complete one of the major space successes for United State scientists. Everything worked "perfectly," the scientists said of the lunar shot to aid them in planning future manned moon landings.

Hollywood—Oscar winner Patricia Neal, 39, was in critical condition after two strokes and brain surgery.

I-J REPORTER ON TOES FOR LOCAL ANGLE

Yes, it's a small world.

Yesterday, the I-J received a letter from Guatemala City, which said:

"While clearing through customs here this afternoon, a young woman saw our name and address on our baggage tags and identified herself as one of your hired hands.

"We lost her during all of the confusion. Please assure her that we did not intentionally avoid her."

It was signed by William R. Talley, attorney of 15 Merim Drive, San Rafael.

Guest Preacher For Methodist Rites Tomorrow

Guest sermons at the 9:30 and 11 a.m. services tomorrow in the First Methodist Church of San Rafael will be Dr. Gertrude Boyd Crane, lecturer and philosopher from Portland, Ore.

"Take Heed What You Hear" will be her topic for both worship services.

Dr. Crane, when a professor at Intermountain Union College in Helena, Mont., had as one of her students in courses in Bible and Christian education, the present minister of First Methodist Church, Rev. Donald H. Baldwin.

The lecturer, in addition to her Sunday morning appearances, has been teaching a special adult class in Bible studies which will conclude Monday evening.

Marin's 'Quiett Man'

By BRUCE COLEMAN

His hair close-cropped, he wears a tweed jacket, Ivy league type tie and a blue fish in his lapel.

Though soft-spoken, he works "noisily" for integration, for better conditions for and greater understanding of minorities in Marin County.

The blue fish is an emblem of the United Presbyterian Church originally worn to denote that the wearer was a Christian.

"IT ALSO means 'fisher of men'," said Quiett.

Greek letters on the pin spell: "IXous," or Jesus Christ, "God's son, Saviour."

Quiett is a ruling elder of St. Andrew United Presbyterian Church. The church owns a piece of land near Highway 101 in Marin City but does not yet have its own sanctuary. It attempts to treat Marin City and Tamalpais Valley as a unit, although, as Quiett says, "there is a hill in between."

Efforts of Quiett's church, in a way, symbolize his work with several Marin County governmental bodies for better understanding among peoples, especially minorities.

THE PIPE-SMOKING Quiett is a salesman for Golden State Mutual Life Insurance in San Francisco.

The first Negro to be appointed to the Marin County Housing Authority Commission, Quiett did not gain his seat without a slight trial.

Quiett was nominated Jan. 30, 1962, by a three-to-one vote, with Supervisor William D. Fusselman opposing and Supervisor George Ludy absent. Then Fusselman reversed his vote and moved reconsideration.

A parliamentary ruling by then County Counsel E. Warren McGuire made it necessary for the board to continue the matter to Feb. 6, at which time the appointment was confirmed.

QUIETT IS director of the Marin Council of Civil Affairs and educational chairman of Protestant Inter-Racial Fellowship Committee.

He was a member of the now defunct Marin City Tenants Council and was honored by the council in February of 1962 for being the first Negro in Marin City named to the Housing Authority. He was Richardson Bay School Parent-Teacher Assn. president in 1962-63 and active in P-TA at Tamalpais High between 1957 and 1960.

Last November he was one of seven elected in Marin City to the Action Committee which is to recommend projects under which Marin City may apply for federal aid through the Economy Opportunities Act (anti-poverty act).

QUIETT'S ABODE in Marin City—22 years—has always been in temporary housing.

He has lived "on the hill," and "on the flat," and, with luck, he plans to have his own home built this year on the corner of Donohue and Buckelew Streets.

QUIETT'S SON, Douglas J. Quiett, who is Marin County chairman of Congress of Racial Equality, lives in Tiburon and works at Marin Country Day School. The Douglas Quietts have three children.

Born in Jackson, La., a town of about 400 people, Quiett left Jackson as a teen-ager and attended high school at Baton Rouge. He came to California in 1943 to work in Marinship as a boilermaker.

He next worked in shipping departments for the Marine Corps and San Francisco Naval Yard and began insurance work on a part-time basis in 1955. He began full-time work in 1960.

QUIETT BELIEVES that Marin City's attitudes are gradually changing.

"Once Marin City felt it was somewhat isolated from the county. But, through organizations such as Protestant Inter-Racial Fellowship Committee," he said, "we have been able to open up community lines on a family-to-family ratio."

He explained that Marin Negro and white families visit each others homes for dinner or just for talk.

INSURANCE SALESMAN and Marin City resident, James Oliver Quiett, 47, is an ardent worker on behalf of his race and for all minorities, and is an active participant in Marin's community life. In his home in Marin City's temporary housing, he proceeds to place a recording detailing Negro history on the turntable of his record player. (Independent-Journal photo)

"THE CHURCH in Marin County, I think, now has a general concern about the race issue. In the past it felt it was just a Negro problem, but now I think most people are aware it is an American problem and needs efforts of all citizens in the county and any local community.

"This is one of the things which will make the passage of the new civil rights bill effective because it has been worked on from the 'grass roots' level."

Quiett said that his church has a "unique ministry" in that it tries to meet a particular man wherever that person might be and minister to his particular need.

THE TWO pastors, one of whom lives in Marin City and one in Tamalpais Valley—both Caucasians—try to bring the two communities together.

"When we accomplish this," continued Quiett, "we will have perhaps one of the best integrated churches in the country."

Quiett praised the establishment of the Human Rights Commission which he said functions primarily to promote better understanding, to open up opportunities for housing and employment and to improve the educational system.

"WE ARE planning, through the commission, programs to meet with employers and union officials to try to qualify minority people for jobs. This will be coordinated with the Anti-Poverty Bill."

Quiett believes there has been improvement in Marin over the past two years in hiring minority groups but believes emphasis, so far on women, should be placed on Negro men.

"If a Negro man can acquire skills to enable him to get and hold a better job and buy a home, it will enhance the whole family."

QUIETT IS concerned, he said, with quality education in Marin City regardless of whether a new segment of Manzanita School is built or the present temporary structure is renovated.

"Tamalpais High is working on programs to upgrade Negro students to bring them up to par," related Quiett. "Some of our problems, I think, have been counseling.

"I hope eventually schools will work with those boys and girls who do not plan to go on to college, to get them to take courses that will lead them to trades of some kind. There is no disgrace for a guy to learn to work with his hands. I believe this is important in a society. I think this is just as important as to train doctors and lawyers."

THE INSURANCE salesman said that remaining temporary housing in Marin City is due to be demolished this year. When this is accomplished, it will be the last phase of the Housing Authority program to relocate residents from temporary housing.

"When the old things are torn down, I believe this will be a help in the integration of the community and make for faster growth," said Quiett.

Quiett's hobbies are reading and sports.

"I like football and baseball especially but," he added, "I like them all."

He prefers to read biographies of famous people and books on history.

The Quiett man is most representative of a citizen caught in the period of change going on in the nation. He seeks integration, a bigger voice in government, a better school and a better home.

TO HIS fellow Negro or person in another minority group, he says:

"Minorities should be active in Marin as a whole and especially in their community. I think this inspires people to take active roles in other areas. I would like to see more people in Marin City be more concerned about the county. We are in a period of change and each citizen has to work to make this change effective."

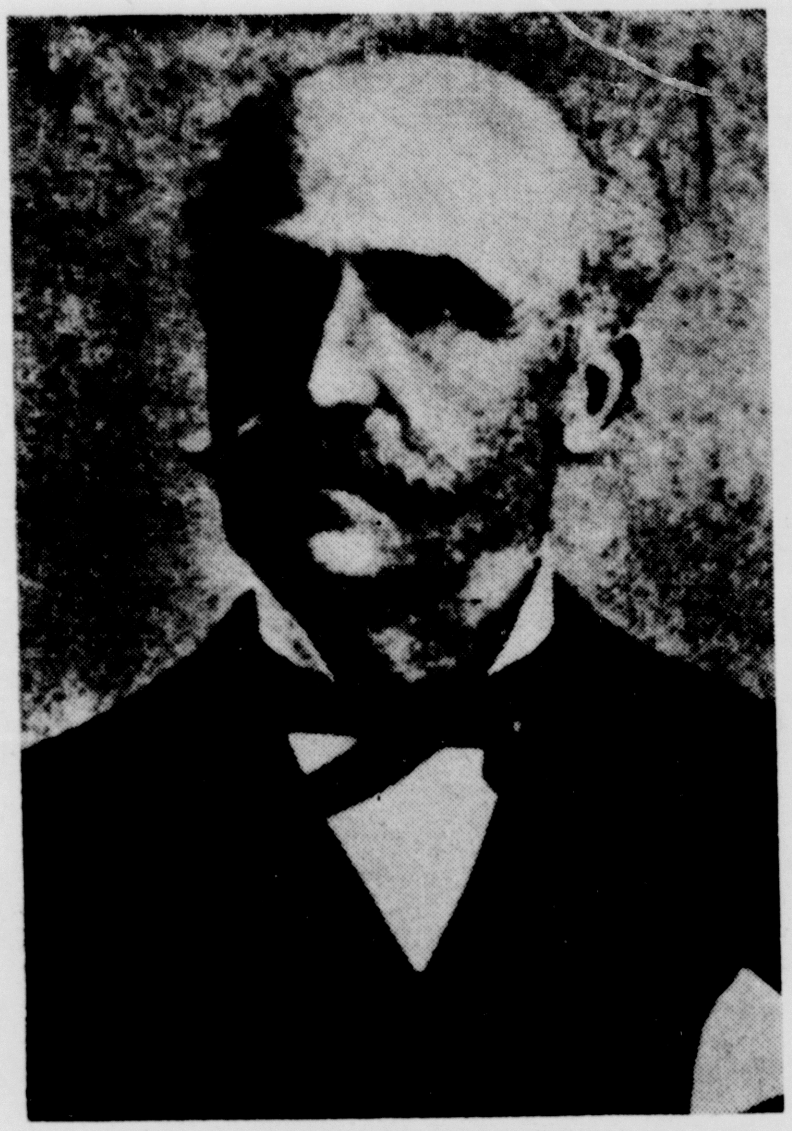
The Story Of Rancho Olompali:



DR. GALEN BURDELL was one of San Francisco's first dentists. He became master of the historic Rancho Olompali when he married Mary Black, and her father, James Black, presented the land to them as a wedding gift. The property remained in the Burdell family until the 1950s.

Much California History Has Been Made On What Was Once Indian's Land Grant

BY FLORENCE DONNELLY
Independent-Journal Historian

Motorists speeding through Marin on the Redwood Highway toward the Sonoma County line are generally unaware they are passing through one of California's great land grants, with a long and exciting history.

This is Rancho Olompali, where the first adobe north of San Francisco Bay was built, where the only battle of the Bear Flag War was fought, and where also, to add to the glamor of its past, there still survive stories of a treasure in gold buried there.

The treasure allegedly brought about a bizarre murder of an Indian chief.

IN 1776 WHEN Spain ruled Mexico and California, Capt. Juan de Ayla sent out several exploring parties from Yerba Buena (San Francisco). Two young Spaniards crossed San Francisco Bay on balsas (rafts of tules latched together).

The balsas, with the explorers and their horses as passengers, Indians at the paddles, landed on what is now known as Marin shore.

The young explorers then rode across the hills and through valleys. They were hot and thirsty when they came to a tree-shaded stream and the Indian village of Olumpali (later the spelling was changed to Olompali). The Indians were friendly and gave the weary travelers food, permitted them to sleep in the wickiups. The horses were pastured in the meadow.

AFTER SEVERAL days of rest, the Spaniards were ready to return to Yerba Buena to report their explorations. But having observed the primitive life of their hosts, they decided to leave them something substantial as a symbol of appreciation.

The young men decided they would teach the Indians how to make adobe bricks, thatch a roof and build a house. The Indians brought in the clay and the explorers showed them how to mix it with wild grasses to make a binder and then put the clay into forms and sun dry it.

This work over, the adobe, a one-room structure 16 by 20 feet, with walls three feet thick, was built in 1776 under the supervision of the Spaniards. That adobe became the home of the chief. A few years later another adobe, 24 by 56 feet with three rooms, was built at a right angle to the first structure.

A FEW YEARS before Mrs. James Burdell sold the property, I went with several historians, including the late Mrs. Theodore Hoover, sister-in-law of former President Herbert Hoover, to Olompali. Mrs. Burdell showed us some of the second Indian adobe, still encased in the walls of the Burdell home to prevent it from being destroyed by the weather. We had the thrill of seeing and touching the old adobe.

The Burdell home was a treasure trove of early Californiana. Mrs. Burdell gave many of its articles to the Marin County Historical Society, and these are now on display in the society's museum at the entrance to Boyd Park in San Rafael. There are Spanish swords, Spanish bits, spurs, pistols, guns, bullets and bullet molds, branding irons, powder horns and, at the gate, a huge tallow kettle.

These gifts were supplemented recently by additional items contributed to the museum by Mrs. Charmain Veronda, a granddaughter of the James Burdells.

Mrs. Burdell took us across the lane that led to her home, and there we saw what had been

INSIDE THIS 26-room mansion, constructed in 1915 on the Burdell Ranch near Novato in the heart of the historic old Rancho Olompali, are the adobe walls built back in the 18th century by Indians taught the skill by visiting Spanish explorers. In recent years, the mansion and grounds have been owned by San Francisco University and used as a retreat. Last year, a group of investors purchased the property and announced their intentions to preserve the mansion and gardens. (Independent-Journal photo)

History Was Made At Rancho Olompali

the communal "kitchen" of the Indians.

HOLES OF varying sizes had been cut into a huge rock and here the Indian women had worked crushing wild oats, other grains, acorns and buckeyes into meal with their pestles. Nearby was a large tree, the center hollowed out by fire, where the Indians had cooked their food.

When vast acreages were given away in California, Camilo Ynita, a Christianized Indian who was chief at Olompali, was granted two square leagues, Rancho Olompali, by the Mexican governor, Manuel Micheltorena, on Oct. 22, 1843. California was by then under Mexican rule, Mexico having achieved her independence from Spain.

"I KNEW this chief, who was a fine, intelligent and shrewd man. He often came over to San Francisco to purchase goods from Nathan Spear, whose agent I then was. He owned 600 cattle, numerous horses and sheep, and was quite a noted breeder of animals. He could read and write and keep accounts, having been educated by the missionaries at Mission San Rafael Arcangel. He was likewise a wheat raiser and sold his crops to the Russians. (The Russians had a settlement at what is known now as Fort Ross).

"General Vallejo always treated Camilo and Solano with high consideration because it was through these men he controlled and conquered the numerous tribes of Indians without shedding of blood. It was also by their assistance that he had command of all the laborers he needed for his vast improvements in Sonoma and Petaluma."

Camilo and the other owners of large grants were totally unprepared for the quick changes the year had brought. The decree of secularization of the Franciscan missions in California resulted in the ruin of an early era of civilization. The friars were forced to leave their missions. The lands, cattle and other goods were confiscated by the Mexican government and the Indians dispersed to return to their primitive way of life.

ONE OF HISTORY'S most controversial characters, John C. Fremont, appeared upon the scene in 1846.

Fremont, an officer with the U.S. topographical engineers, had come west ostensibly to explore the region. What his real purpose was is a matter of conjecture.

In his party as described by James W. Marshall were "Americans, French, English, Swiss, Poles, Russians, Prussians, Chilians, Germans, Greeks, Austrians, Pawnees, native Indians, etc. . . . Some wore the relics of their homespun garments, some relied on the antelope and bear for their wardrobe, some lightly habited in buckskin leggins and a coat of warpaint and their weapons were equally various . . ."

FREMONT WITH his awe-inspiring "army" first went north, and then came to the Sacramento Valley in the spring of 1846. The Californians, as the naturalized citizens of Mexico were called, were told that the Americans — Fremont and the settlers — had come to confiscate their lands. Other rumors terrified the Californians.

The settlers naturally turned to Fremont for leadership while Gen. Jose Castro was the dominant figure in the Californians' group.

Early in June, General Castro went to Sonoma, consulted with Mariano G. Vallejo, a colonel in the Mexican Army, and was given 170 horses. These were to be sent to Santa Clara, where Castro was organizing his forces, with an escort headed by Lt. Francisco Arce and Jose Alviso.

ON JUNE 9, a party including Ezekiel Merritt as leader, Granville P. Swift, Henry L. Ford, Robert Semple and several others, started after Arce from the vicinity of Fremont's camp. This movement had Fremont's approval if it were not ordered by him, according to Fred B. Rogers in his story of Merritt.

Merritt's party surprised and captured Arce and his men. The captured horses were taken to Fremont's party on the Bear River on June 11, 1846. Merritt's party proceeded on to Sonoma by an indirect route, and captured General Vallejo, his brother, Salvador Vallejo, Jacob Leese and Lt. Col. Victor Prudon.

There were some in the party who wished to sack the Vallejo home. Others wanted General Vallejo hung, according to Henry L. Ford.

REASON PREVAILED and it was decided to take the captured to Sutter's Fort under a guard which included the famous scout, Kit Carson.

A small group of Americans remained at Sonoma. They had no authority to raise the American Flag to replace that of Mexico which had been hauled down when the little citadel fell into American hands. The exact date of the raising of the Bear Flag also became a subject of controversy. Historians generally agree it occurred June 14, 1846.

The flag, with a crude picture of a grizzly bear, symbol of bravery, carried the words "Republic of California." In the corner was a single star.

THE GARRISON at Sonoma then elected officers.

Henry L. Ford was chosen first lieutenant.

Ford, born in New Hampshire, had served with the U.S. Army in the Mississippi Valley.

Many settlers and their families came to Sonoma for protection.

CAPT. JOHN B. Montgomery, U.S. Navy, commanding the Portsmouth then at Saucelito, had been notified of the capture of Sonoma and received a plea from General Vallejo to use his influence to save "the helpless inhabitants (at Sonoma) from violence and anarchy." Montgomery sent his emissary to Sonoma to assure Alcalde Berreyesa and members of the Vallejo family they would be protected.

The Americans at Sonoma were incensed when they learned that two of their men, Thomas Cowie and another named Fowler, who had been sent by Lieutenant Ford to a rancho on the Russian River to get a keg of powder, had been captured by a band of Californians, tortured and murdered.

About this time two other Americans were captured by the Californians and Ford decided to form a rescue party.

SO MANY men volunteered for service that every fifth man in line was chosen for the rescue squad. Ford and his men left Sonoma on the morning of June 23. They camped that night at Rancho Laguna de San Antoino in Marin and in the morning captured four Mexicans who were near the lagoon.

After they had their breakfast, Ford with 14 men rode to Rancho Olompali, leaving the others to guard the prisoners.

The lieutenant saw a number of horses in the Olompali corral, but only a few men nearby. After tethering his spare horses in a small canyon, the lieutenant formed his small group into two units and rode toward the corral to get fresh mounts. To his great surprise he saw more men beneath the trees and others came running out of Ynita's adobe.

FORD ORDERED his men to dismount and take cover under the trees. The Californians, armed with muskets and lances, began an encircling charge which was met by fire from Ford's men. After several of their men had fallen the Californians withdrew to a position on a hill out of gun range. Firing by both sides continued for awhile, then the Californians rode away.

Some went to San Rafael, other to Saucelito.

On the 'battlefield," near the adobe, was the body of Manuel Cantua, also several wounded Californians. Naturally the Americans boasted of a great victory and reports of those killed and injured were exaggerated.

ACCORDING TO Roger's account, Fremont arrived at Sonoma June 25 and left the following day for San Rafael with a force of 124 including Lieutenant Ford. In the late afternoon Fremont arrived at the mission in San Rafael and he and his men camped there.

On June 28 an event took place in San Rafael which reflected adversely on the revolt and particularly on Fremont. Two young Spaniards, Ramon and Francisco de Haro, twins, and their uncle, Don Jose Berreyesa, who was on his way to Sonoma to visit his son, had come by boat up what is now called the San Rafael Canal and landed. Fremont always insisted the three were carrying a message to Joaquin de la Torre, a Mexican officer. This was not proven. But the twins and their uncle were shot and killed by Fremont's men.

IT WAS SOON replaced by the Stars and Stripes. The U. S. military was in command of Califorina until 1850 when the Golden State was admitted to the union and Marin became one of the state's original counties.

Camilo Ynita abided by the decisions of those in authority, bewildering as these changes were.

Following California's admission to the union, the government set up a land commission to consider the validity of the grants of land which had been made by the Spanish and Mexican governments. Camilo's grant was confirmed by the commission on Dec. 18, 1852. Camilo sold the greater part of the rancho to James Black for $5,200 that year, reserving about a hundred acres, for himself and his family. This portion was called Apalacocha.

Camilo lived there only a few years. He was murdered in 1856.

ACCOUNTS OF the murder differed.

Steve Richardson said: "Black gave Camilo gold coin for the property. . . . He buried his treasure as the safest way of keeping it but it ultimately proved his undoing. Very surething men of the day strove in vain to get some inkling of the hiding place. A woman tried her luck, making violent love to Camilo. Enraged at her ill success, she waylaid Camilo and shot him with an arrow through the heart . . . So the $5,000 in gold coin the Indian buried is waiting for a finder still."

Camilo had made his will Sept. 28, 1855. On Sept. 22, 1856, his estate was admitted to probate.

To his widow, Camilo left a small sum of money and "three yoke of oxen, two tame horses and some pigs." Maxima Bennett and Maria Antonia sold their interest in the rancho to John Knight for $3,693 on Nov. 20, 1860.

Knight, according to an agreement, executed a permit for the widow, Susana, "to build a house and reside on the portion of the land called Apalacocha — the area near the top of a hill where there is a spring of water and some land now cultivated adjacent to the boundary line of the rancho called Novato—until she remarries or until the rest of her natural life."

JAMES BLACK, who was born in Inverness, Scotland, in 1807, "followed the sea" when he was a lad. He had shipped on one of the Hudson Bay Co.'s vessels bound for the North Pacific coast.

When the ship made port at Monterey, Calif., Black was ill with typhoid fever and put on shore. He recovered his health. In 1835, General Vallejo, worried by the influx of settlers and particularly by the Russians at Fort Ross, said he would make large grants of land to Black, another Scotsman, Edward MacIntosh, and James Dawson if they would settle on the grant.

In 1843, Black married Maria Augustina Sias. They had two daughters.

MARIA BLACK died in 1864 and a few years later Black married the widow of Ygnacio Pacheco, the former Maria Duarte and member of an old Spanish family who had been born at the Presidio in San Francisco. Pacheco was the owner of Rancho San Jose and Black had been a witness at the Pachecos' wedding.

When his daughter, Mary, was married to Dr. Galen Burdell, on Sept. 13, 1865, Black gave them his property at Rancho Olompali as a wedding present.

Black had previously sold 816 acres of the rancho to Abraham Ward for $3,246. He had also deeded Frederick Nauert 1,095 acres for $5,380.

Black had other immense holdings in Marin County including a 12,000 acre ranch in Nicasio. He died in 1870.

THE OLOMPALI estate remained in the Burdell family until the 1950s.

Dr. Burdell's wife, soon after her marriage, began redesigning the grounds at Rancho Olompali, having the area in front of the ranch house graded in long, graceful terraces. The late Mrs. George Boyd (Margaret Kittle) in her booklet, "Reminiscences of Early Marin Gardens," wrote:

"To Mrs. Burdell belongs the distinction of building the first ambitious garden in the county."

Undoubtedly, someone will ask the question: "Why isn't this historical landmark marked?"

I can answer that.

When I was a member of the state committee appointed to locate and mark historical places, a marker with the words "Rancho Olompali" was put on the highway in front of what was then the Burdell Ranch.

Motorists would drive into the ranch. Carloads of them would get out, walk everywhere and often try to get into the house.

THEY PICNICKED under the trees, leaving paper and other litter. This became such a nuisance that finally, then owner Mrs. James Burdell asked that the sign be removed.

Mrs. James Burdell was the former Josephine Sweetser, born in Novato. She was the daughter of John R. Sweetser and granddaughter of Joseph B. Sweetser, names prominent in Northern Marin and California history.

Mrs. James Burdell, widowed in 1933, died in 1964 in Petaluma at the age of 89.

She had sold the Burdell Ranch, as the heart of the old Olompali Rancho had come to be commonly known, to the University of San Francisco after the death of her son, James Burdell Jr., in 1950.

THE UNIVERSITY used it as a retreat for Jesuit priests.

Then, last year, just a week after the death of Mrs. Burdell, it was revealed that the ranch had been sold again.

A group of 50 Marin and San Francisco investors had bought the 760 acres with its rich history from the university for a price "in excess of one million dollars" with the announced intention of preserving the Burdell mansion and gardens.

Since then, a spirited campaign has been under way, headed by the Marin County Historical Society and other interested groups, to expedite the preservation of the historic mansion (largely built in 1915, but including adobe from the 18th century) and the site of the Bear Flag War's only battle.

I STILL remember how, when I visited the rancho years ago, Mrs. Burdell pointed out for me a tree where a cross had been slashed to mark the place where the Californian was killed, the lone fatality of the fight that set the stage for the territory's release from Mexican rule.

The cross had been almost obliterated by bark growing over it.

Whether the building, too, will be lost, with its historical significance, remains to be seen.

But today, the 26-room mansion still stands. And in it, the adobe bricks produced by the Indians who had mastered a new skill taught them in appreciation for their hospitality by their two Spanish visitors.

A Visit With The Presidents

Marin Boys Salute Abe, Washington

So learn Marin youngsters in their classrooms.

And so two of the boys, Mark Miggins, 11, and his brother, Richard, 8, of 332 Bretano Way, Greenbrae, thought it appropriate that they spend their holiday away from school visiting with those Presidents.

They accomplished that by visiting the Wax Museum at San Francisco's Fisherman's Wharf.

There they studied life-sized, life-like sculptures in wax of Abraham Lincoln and George Washington.

And found, among the 140 figures, still other American chief executives, not February-born, but nevertheless of special interest to any history-minded boy in this most patriotic of months.

YOUNG RICHARD MIGGINS found that the Wax Museum's version of George Washington was not carrying the legendary axe with which he chopped down the cherry tree. But the sword that crossed the Delaware proved just as interesting to the boy

"FOUR SCORE AND seven . . ." It's easy for Richard and Mark Miggins to imagine that they are listening to a reading of his eternally-meaningful Gettysburg Address by the very realistic waxen Abraham Lincoln at the museum. Even the lines of sadness and worry have been etched into the face of the Great Emancipator.

MARK AND RICHARD become acquainted with still another great American President, Franklin Delano Roosevelt. FDR was not born in February. But he missed by but two days, his birthdate being Jan. 30. There was another President of the United States, however, who, like Washington and Lincoln, was February-born. Do you know who? After their field trip into American history, the Miggins boys can tell you that he was William Henry Harrison, born Feb. 9.

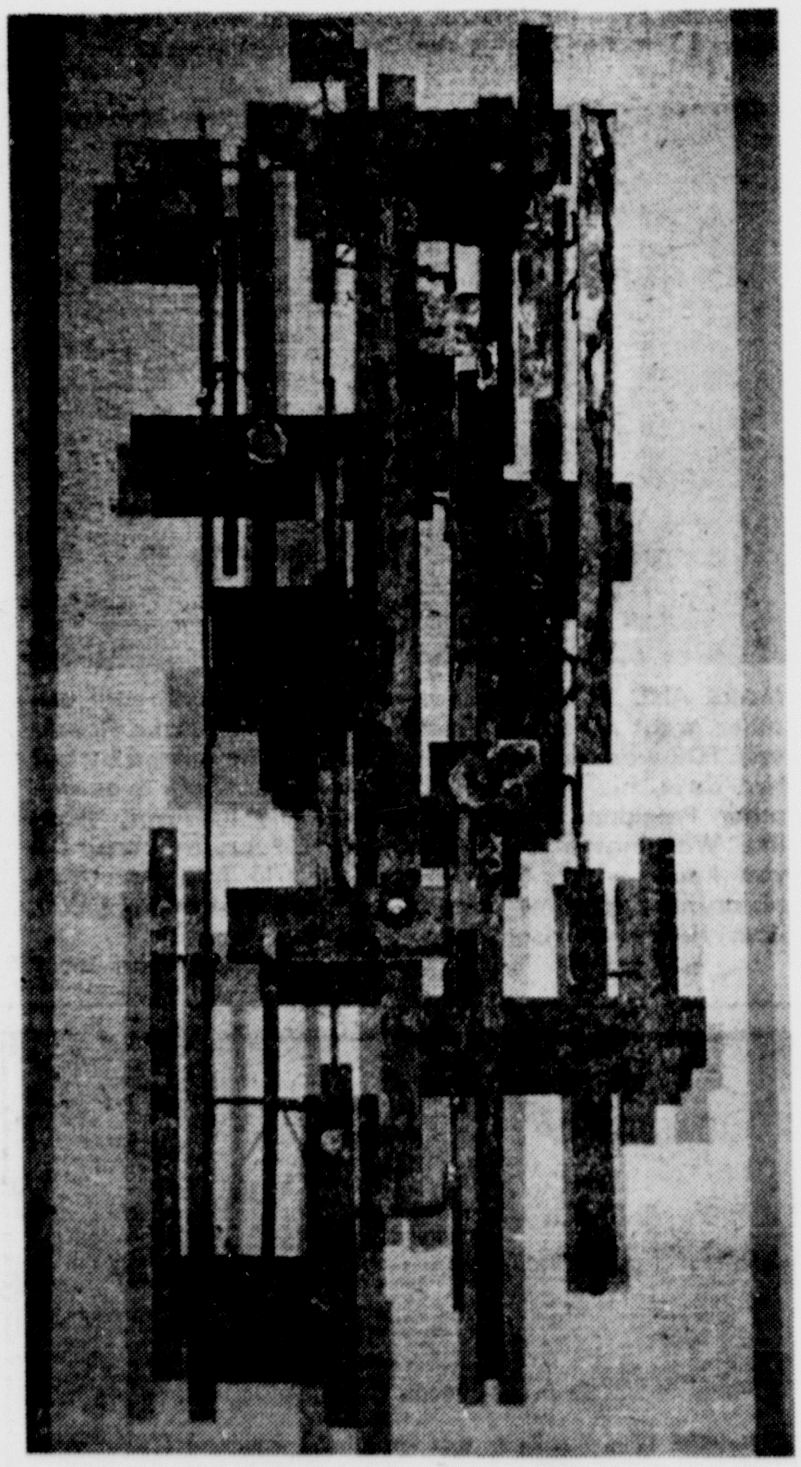
IN HIS GARAGE STUDIO in Mill Valley, sculptor William Wallace (Chick) Wood Jr. practices his unusual technique of applying heat and chemicals to copper plates to achieve artificial patinas. At top, another distinctive Wood approach to sculpture — an assemblage of brass-coated carpenter's nails.



A HANGING PIECE by sculptor Chick Wood combines both rectilinear and free form copper plates on brass rod framework. The copper bears the artificial patina that distinguishes Wood's work. His sculpture of this type ranges in size from three to five feet in height (this one stands five feet tall), one to two feet in width and approximately five inches in depth.

He Calls It Controlled Corrosion

Chemistry and the welder's torch are combined by Chick Wood into a highly individualistic approach to the art of sculpture.

He refers to his process as "controlled corrosion."

The heating temperature often exceeds 10,000 degrees Fahrenheit.

Another recent Chick Wood creation is a freestanding assemblage of ordinary carpenter's nails, bent at right angles and partially coated with brass.

Wood says that all his work is influenced strongly by architecture—"the play of light and shadow across the sculpture is largely responsible for the created 'effect'."

HE HOLDS A degree in architecture from the University of Virginia, and explains that "the study of architecture naturally led me to an interest in sculpture. I explored all of the usual sculpture media—clay, metals, wood and stone—but decided a lot could be done with copper which most sculptors don't use because of its expense."

Born in St. Louis, he spent his early years in New York before enrolling at the University of Virginia.

After earning his degree, he studied at the Universita de Firenze and Il Centro per Stranieri, both in Florence, Italy. He traveled through northern and southern Europe and North Africa, spent two years working on ships in the West Indies and off the northern coast of South America and was employed b ya number of architectural firms in the New York area.

At present, he works for the architectural firm of Walker & Moody in San Francisco, devoting his spare hours to his sculpture.

His sculpture ranges in size from three to five feet in height, one to two feet in width and approximately five inches in depth. His copper plates are either geometric or free form in shape.

Now 29, he is being hailed as "one of the hottest young artists in the Bay Area."

A PIE in the face can still be hilarious humor, especially for the little ones, and particularly when it is done by a veteran slapstick comedian. And Doodles Weaver, star of the "A Day With Doodles" children's TV show being filmed in Marin, is just the kind of a comic who can put it over.

Doodles Weaver In Marin

DOODLES WEAVER breaks up Burt Hixson, Tri-Continent's vice president and director of photography, with one of his quips. The actor and the widely known cameraman are shown on location at the Marin Art and Garden Center in Ross where they were shooting one of the "A Day With Doodles" vignettes for television.

Think you have been running into an unusually large number of madcap characters on Marin's streets and byways these days?

Well, there's a very good chance that at least several of those characters are one and the same person—himself something of a character.

Doodles Weaver, television's man of many faces, has visited just about every community in Marin now for the shooting of episodes for his zany "A Day with Doodles Weaver" series, a TV program distributed nationaliy for the entertainment of children.

DOODLES WEARS an outlandish array of costumes as he portrays a whole gamut of comedy characters in the wacky five-minute vignettes.

All outdoor sequences in the series are filmed in Marin. And this constitutes about two-thirds of the shows.

And the man behind the series is a Marinite, Jim Morgan of the Tiburon Peninsula, whose Tri-Continent Productions Inc., a new Bay Area television and motion picture film-making company, is producing the programs.

"THERE'S A Charlie Chaplin quality in Doodles," Morgan says of his star. "That's why I chose him of all the people in Hollywood—he's the best I could find. His talent is particularly valuable in portraying three or four characters during one episode. Just wait until Bay Area kids see him!"

"A Day With Doodles" began six months ago when Morgan finished his first script, rented a camera for $50 a day, went to Doodles' home and directed and shot the pilot film.

"It turned out that for less than $500, I had produced a children's show that was an instant hit, bringing $130,000 on the sale of the series to just one station," Morgan says.

AT THIS time Morgan was still a partner in Independent Productions Associated in the producing of the Weaver show. Late in 1964 this relationship was dissolved, and Morgan created his own company.

"The Doodles Weaver shows needed music, so I went to Chicago, and there Robert O. Ragland and I wrote five songs for the program," Morgan relates. "The man who controls more than half the juke boxes in America liked the Doodles' theme music so much that he has ordered 5,000 records as a starter."

SO FAR, 152 of the vignettes starring the veteran of more than 40 years in show business—stage, touring, radio, movies and television—have been completed. The company is now working at a three shows per week clip on a second batch of Doodles comedies.

Already the shorts for children have made a hit on Eastern and Midwestern TV stations.

Another of Morgan's shows for the very young viewers is "Rod Rocket." It is now being shown in 30 U. S. markets and in England and Japan.

MORGAN, A veteran of 30 years in broadcasting and motion pictures, can claim credit for the production of many entertainment programs.

He has produced for Edgar Bergen, Maurice Chevalier and Johnny Carson, and served as program director for radio station KSFO.

In addition, Morgan has a background in education, both in the San Francisco public school system and as an instructor at Mills College. He is a pioneer in the field of public affairs and educational programming for children.

MORGAN SAYS his basic idea in the formation of Tri-Continent as a commercial film-making firm was "to produce really funny shows that would delight children and at the same time be applauded by parents."

Morgan's supervising writer for the Doodles Weaver series is Cally Curtis, vice president of Tri-Continent and one of the few female executives in the film industry. Her talent has been used, since her graduation from Stanford University after World War II, in nearly every phase of film, TV and radio production.

Morgan has also brought Burt Hixson and Al Street from Hollywood as members of his staff.

HIXSON IS vice president in charge of production, and is known as one of Hollywood's more creative young producers and cinematographers. His skill with the cinema camera has brought him international recognition.

YES, THEY'RE ALL one and the same person — television's Doodles Weaver displaying his versatility on location in Marin as he dons a wide variety of costumes and faces to portray comic characters in his series for children.

Doodles Weaver—Television's Man Of Many Faces

Marin Is Currently The Home Base Of The Veteran Madcap Comedian

But behind this facade, there is also the creative brain that is always ticking off new and ingenious ideas.

THIS IS reflected by his hobby list, past and present, that is almost unbelievably varied. Among those activities are magic tricks, photography, song-writing, guitar playing, stamp collecting, pottery and jewelry making, copper enameling, rock collecting, building model railroads, gourmet cooking, radio hamming, printing, chicken farming and, oddest of all, predicting the weather for a Los Angeles newspaper for five years.

Such a limitless range of interests not only keeps Morgan entertained and engrossed, but it also provides him with enormous versatility in serving the needs of advertising agencies and industries that come to his Tri-Continent for commercial film, including animations.

ANOTHER featured service is the original composition for background music.

And most certainly, it is the only company employing the services of the one and only Doodles Weaver in pie-throwing, prat-falling, laugh provoking antics that tickle the funny-bones of little television viewers. And sometimes cause Marinites, unforewarned, to gasp in wonder at the unorthodox behavior of that funny-looking little old lady or that white-haired baseball player.

Rest assured, it's just Doodles rehearsing for one of his character portrayals.

IT'S ANOTHER Doodles Weaver character. The series consists of five-minute vignettes with Doodles sometimes portraying two or three characters in a single show. The series is already established as a hit and a financial success through sales in the East.

BOOK PAGES

The Radio Priest And Social Justice

By DON KEOWN

FATHER COUGHLIN AND THE NEW DEAL by Charles J. Tull, University of Syracuse Press, 292 pages, $6.50.

LORD HAW-HAW & WILLIAM JOYCE by J. A. Cole, Farrar, Straus and Giroux, 316 pages, $4.95.

Charles J. Tull has written his book, "Father Coughlin and the New Deal," under serious handicaps.

The one-time famed and controversial radio priest, having lived outside the public view for two decades, refused to cooperate in any way, as did understandably, the Detroit Archdiocese of the Roman Catholic Church.

There were no Coughlin papers to be researched.

In some cases, surviving members of the Franklin D. Roosevelt administration balked at disclosing facets of some of the relationships between the priest and the Democratic federal government.

Considering these obstacles, Tull has done a creditable job. relying extensively upon the Coughlinite publication Social Justice, upon recorded utterances and writings of the priest, and upon those colleagues and governmental officials willing to supply information.

Tull traces the career of Father Coughlin from his first appearance before a radio microphone in 1931 to begin an attack upon the Hoover administration and his favorite whipping boy, the international banker, to his championing of a vague program which he called social justice and support of the candidacy of Roosevelt.

Later, rebuked by the President, he became his most vociferous foe. He fought many of the New Deal programs even when they seemed in agreement with his social justice philosophy. He ranted against U.S. involvement in European affairs and became an apologist for the Nazi-Fascist axis. And he developed a virulent case of anti-Semitism.

Finally, an embarrassed Detroit Archdiocese was pleased to cooperate with the government in silencing Coughlin's political activities and ending his connection with the thoroughly discredited Social Justice.

In the book, Tull seems to bend over backwards in his attempts to be fair to Father Coughlin. And in so doing, he sometimes appears unfair to those who opposed the priest's political demagogery.

This is largely corrected in Tull's concluding summary that seems realistic enough. It is, however, Tull's decision that Father Coughlin was not a Fascist, although his book seems to point out more similarities between the Social Justice movement and Fascism than it does dissimilarities.

There were the constant shifts in direction that bordered on the irrational, the arrogance with which he wielded monolithic power, the reliance upon his gift for oratory and the use of propaganda media, the shifting between inflexibility and a willingness to make unwholesome alliances to further his causes, his resorting to personal attack instead of discussion of the issues, the absence of constructive proposals from his largely negative programs, a militant nationalism, a despair of democracy, his espousing of something called "the corporate state," his rigid anti-communism, a sympathy for non-communistic totalitarian regimes, and finally his venture into anti-Semitism.

In the end, Tull sees the huge following which Father Coughlin mobilized with his incredibly confused program and silver tongue as a warning of this country susceptibility to demagogues. And adds that we may not always have an immensely-popular and resourceful leader such as FDR at the helm to oppose such movements.

IF THERE was room for controversy as to whether or not Father Coughlin's views constituted Fascism, there was no such doubt about the beliefs of William Joyce, the Nazi propagandist of World War II.

Yet Joyce is accorded surprisingly sympathetic treatment by British writer J. A. Cole in his "Lord Haw-Haw & William Joyce."

The reader may have some difficulty in agreeing that the shabby, egocentric Fascist fanatic is deserving of such sympathy.

Cole tells the full story of Joyce from his birth in New York City through periods spent in Ireland, England and Germany, to his death on the British gallows for treason.

He details his gradual involvement in and commitment to the ragtag British Fascist movement until finally, when faced with a choice between political philosophy and England which he had supported with an intense nationalism, Joyce selected the former and fled to Germany just before the outbreak of World War II.

Cole also traces the evolution of the Lord Haw-Haw myth in Britain.

At first, the title was accorded, not Joyce, but a predecessor broadcasting for the Nazis. But when Joyce gradually became identified with the label, his conceit caused him to embrace the resulting fame and infamy gladly. And in so doing, he sealed his ultimate fate. Less publicized turncoat propagandists escaped the death penalty. But Joyce, who as Lord Haw-Haw had been credited with fantastic feats by the British and thus had earned a special hatred, paid for his assumption of the spotlight with his life.

Cole looks closely at the legalistic aspects of the Joyce trial for treason which revolved around the extent of allegiance he owed to Great Britain. The crown admitted that Joyce was not a British citizen. But it contended, and successfully, he went to Germany under the protection of a British passport, and thus owed England his fidelity at the time he began his broadcasting for the country's enemies.

Cole seems to see some mitigation for Joyce in his unswerving, unapologetic adherence to his "ideals." Whether "ideals" is a proper terminology for the social sickness of Naziism is questionable. And whether loyalty to such psychotic "principles" is in anyway admirable is likewise debatable.

Sleuths & Suspense

THE FORTUNE HUNTERS by Joan Aiken, Crime Club, 190 pages, $3.50. Reviewed by Don Keown.

But it is an exceedingly competent piece of work and an excellent example of "the maiden in peril" type of suspense tale.

Young magazine editor Annette Sheldon has won a fortune in the football pool. But she has also suffered a setback in her health, and has been ordered to convalesce in her newly-acquired home in a secluded English village.

There she attracts the interest of a number of other characters including a catty magazine associate, a brash young archaeologist and a brilliant and charming artist. But for at least some of them, it is her money, not Annette herself, that is the chief attraction.

The splendid use which the author makes of her rural English setting adds incalculably to the value of a book which the women, in particular, will enjoy thoroughly.

Our Reviewers And The New Reading

Newspaper Novel

SUNDAY AND DAILY by Richard Powell, Charles Scribner's Sons, 313 pages, $4.95. Reviewed by Richard Lyttle.

This is an excellent novel about the newspaper business written by a man who has had the experience to back up his understanding.

The book draws its strength from the characters that Powell presents. The plot is simple but strong enough to draw these characters together in a moment of decision.

The "Evening and Sunday Mail" is struggling to remain independent even though an easy solution of its problems is offered through sale to a publishing chain.

The question of how the board of directors meets this challenge is sufficient to carry the reader rapidly through the book.

Powell exposes the weaknesses of his characters ruthlessly yet generates sympathy for them and their problems. This is an outstanding gift of storytelling.

The author, through this exciting yarn, is also able to focus attention on the biggest crisis in journalism, that of the metropolitan daily forced to close down in the face of rising costs and competition.

For The Angler

FRESH-WATER FISHING ILLUSTRATED by Marie Morrison, Lane Books, 80 pages, $1.95. Reviewed by Wat Takeshita.

This illustrated booklet arouses a little of that competitive spirit —the urge to outsmart the fish.

The author "humanizes" the fish, giving it credit for being able to sense danger by using sight, hearing and sense of touch.

Tempt him, play on his survival reflex (his main mission in life seems to be to satisfy his hunger), but don't scare him, the author warns.

And then he proceeds to explain the temperamental eating habits of various types of fish in streams and lakes west of the Rockies. He completes the picture with illustrated explanations on casting equipment, lures, and techniques, and how and where to use them.

The practical tips offered should be a useful supplement to what the Marin angler has learned from experience.

Three By Dover

OLD-TIME SCHOOLS AND SCHOOL BOOKS by Clifton Johnson, 381 pages.

THE PEOPLE CALLED SHAKERS by Edward Deming Andrews, 240 pages plus appendices, all Dover Publications, paperbacks, $2 each. Reviewed by Bryce W. Anderson.

Dover Publications includes many oddities of Americana among its well-bound paperbacks. Three such are these new additions.

Clifton Johnson wrote "Old-Time Schools and School-Books" early in this century. It is a fascinating collection of information about, and illustrations and selections from early American school books of many kinds. These range from the early hornbooks and battledores — which weren't even books at all —to the series productions of Webster, Bingham and others.

McGuffey came along too late to be considered "old-time" by Johnson, and is barely mentioned among the more modern school book producers.

"Old-Time Schools and School-Books" also contains a wealth of information about the early schools themselves. It has plenty of illustrations of these also— for Johnson, a fellow surely as fascinating as any of his more than 100 books, was artist and photographer as well as writer.

This volume, published originally by Columbia University in 1947, is of more limited interest than Johnson's school book excursion. It contains much of interest to students of folklore and superstitions, however. The similarities and dissimilarities of the many, many Ozark superstitions described in it with those of a reader's own part of the country are of interest.

"The People Called Shakers" by Edward Deming Andrews is a scholarly, sympathetic study of the almost-vanished cult which had its beginning among a group of English Separatists in the 1760s, reached its zenith with some 6,000 members in the decade before the Civil War, then fell into a gradual and steady decline.

Celibacy was the keystone of the religion of the Society of Believers, although the shaking demonstrations of religious fervor that gave the Believers the name of Shakers were of more fascination to the public. Adherence to celibacy made possible a monastic type of communal organization that succeeded better than most experiments in non-political communism.

Andrews contends the Shakers had a greater impact on the development of the United States than is generally recognized—a contention that has been made by other writers in behalf of many of the multitude of sects that sprang into being in the century from about 1750 to 1850.

Some Just-Published Books For The Juniors

Some new books for the junior readers:

"The Great Adventure of Michelangelo" (Doubleday, $5.95) is an abridged edition of Irving Stone's much-admired adult best-seller "The Agony and the Ectasy," especially edited and illustrated for children in the 10 to 12-year-old bracket. The idea seems to us a good one, as long as the "writing down" and simplification is not carried too far. And here, it does not seem that it has. The essential story of Michelangelo remains, related at a level that is considerably higher than the average book written for the child only, and yet well within the grasp of youngsters.

For a gripping, if somewhat incredible yarn about war in the Pacific, try Robb White's "The Survivor" (Doubleday, $3.50). It reads like a comic book, but the characters are fairly well drawn and the suspense is marvelous. White makes the error of putting present day slang in the mouth of his hero and he mar Marines calling their rifles "guns," but young readers should be able to overlook this.

Freelance writer Irwin R. Blacker, a specialist in the history of Spanish America, is the author of the new Horizon Caravel Series book, "Cortes and the Aztec Conquest" (American Heritage, $3.95). This is the story of the fall of the powerful Aztec Empire of Mexico to Spanish adventurer Hernando Cortes and his conquistadors, thus marking the start of four centuries of Spanish domination over a major portion of the Western Hemisphere's mainland. Blacker tells it well, and the publisher has provided lavish illustrations, 129 in all, 33 in color, ranging from photographs of artifacts and art still in existence to prints and paintings. As always with this series, the book is sturdily and handsomely bound.

"Nothing To Do" by Russell Hoban (Harper, $2.50) tells how when one morning when Walter Possum greeted his father with "I have nothing to do. Nothing at all to do," father found a "something-to-do" stone. And that stone, together with a "play-right-here" stick changed everything for Walter and his friends. Pictures by Lillian Hoban enliven an interesting book for the young child.

"Railroad Engineers and Airplane Pilots" by Carla Greene (Harper, $1.95) relates the facts about two exciting careers in words the beginner can read and understand for himself. The author follows engineer Kelly and pilot Joe Smith through years of training and experience in their careers. Three-colored pictures by Leonard Kessler add to the humor, realism and instruction of the book.

A loop of string seems an unlikely "hero" for a book, but that is just what the title character is in "Twirly" (Coward-McCann, $2.50) by Elaine Moss with pictures by Shan Ellentuck. And we wouldn't be surprised if the little ones are charmed by the antics and adventures of Twirly and young friends Jane and John. Indeed, the dustjacket says that Twirly is the invention of a child — the author's 7-year-old daughter.

The Stereo Scene With Sunier

By JOHN SUNIER
KBRG Program Manager

HAYDN: Concerti for Flute, Oboe and Orchestra Nos. 2, 3 and 4—Collegium Musicum of Paris with J. P. Rampal, flute/P. Pierlot, oboe/Roland Douatte, conductor—Music Guild Stereo S-50:

These three works were originally created on a court commission for an oddball instrument of the time called a lira organizzata. It was a hand-held instrument with organ pipes instead of strings and a hand-operated bellows. Its fad was short-lived and later Haydn adapted the concerti for two lyra, giving one part to the flute and the other to the oboe.

The compositions are similar to divertimenti, with spotlight on the two woodwind instruments. Both soloists on this recording are superb and sound is fine.

MUSIC FOR ROYAL COURTS OF LOUIS XIV and LOUIS XV—Collegium Musicum of Paris conducted by Roland Douatte—Music Guild Stereo S-49:

Much of this LP duplicates Nonesuch H-1009; it is the same group of performers, but the original recording was made by a different Parisian record company than the Nonesuch performances.

There are two suites by Mouret, "Symphonies for the King's Supper," by De Lalande, "Carrousel of 1686" by Lully, and a march by Charpentier. The three works which are also on the Nonesuch LP are heard in entirely different arrangements of movements or sections here—such sections appear on one but not the other, etc.

The performances are in stereo, with good sound, but they are not half as energetic and exciting as those on the other album. Perhaps Monsieur Douatte's group was somewhat bored with the music by the time of this later recording.

BUXTEHUDE: Four Sonatas from Opus 1, Canzonettas in C Major and G Minor, Suite in E Minor No. 12 — Robert Brink, violin; Judith Davidoff, viola da gamba; Daniel Pinkham, harpsichord and regal—Music Guild Stereo S-57:

Strongly influenced by Schutz and a dominant influence on Bach, this 16th century composer is better known for his organ and choral works than for his chamber music.

The member of the viol family in this trio has a subordinate role, often merely playing a continuo part with the harpsichord or small "regal" organ. But its sound, plus that of the harpsichord add an authentic air to the music that would be missing if the usual cello and piano had been used.

TELEMANN: Quartet in G Major for flute, oboe, violin, bassoon and harpsichord; Quartet in e minor for flute, violin, bassoon and harpsichord; Sonata in A Major for flute, oboe, bassoon and harpsichord; Quartet in d minor for flute, violin, oboe, bassoon and harpsichord; Trio in E Major for flute, violin, bassoon and harpsichord — The Baroque Ensemble of Paris — Music Guild Stero S-54:

First stereo recording of any of the quartets of Telemann.

This composer, who was far more famous than Bach in his day, has suffered neglect for two centuries which only now is being corrected through numerous performances and recordings of selections from his gigantic collection of works.

For a German composer, this music is extremely French-ified. It is graceful and charming in every way.

China Closet Homemaker's Best Friend

MEASURE THE width of the largest item to be stored in the closet, and use that as the measurement for the installation's depth. Usually a maximum of 15 inches will do it.

Next measure the height of stacks of plates, goblets, and so on, and arrange shelf spacing so that all eight-inch items go on one shelf, all ten-inch on another.

Reserve the lowest part of the closet for shallow silver and linen drawers. Large tablecloths can be arranged on swinging rods to minimize folding, and serving trays should be stored on end.

MAKE THE closet generous in size, as wide as possible and extending from floor to ceiling. Seldom-used items can be set on top shelves.

Front of the closet can be designed to look like a paneled wall if doors are built of tongue-and-groove boards one-by-four inches in size. Panel boards should be continued on at least one other wall in the dining room to complete the deception.

You can use a prestige softwood for paneling and doors. Western hemlock and cedar are two of the loveliest woods. Interior shelving can be hard-wearing Douglas fir.

New Look And A New Use

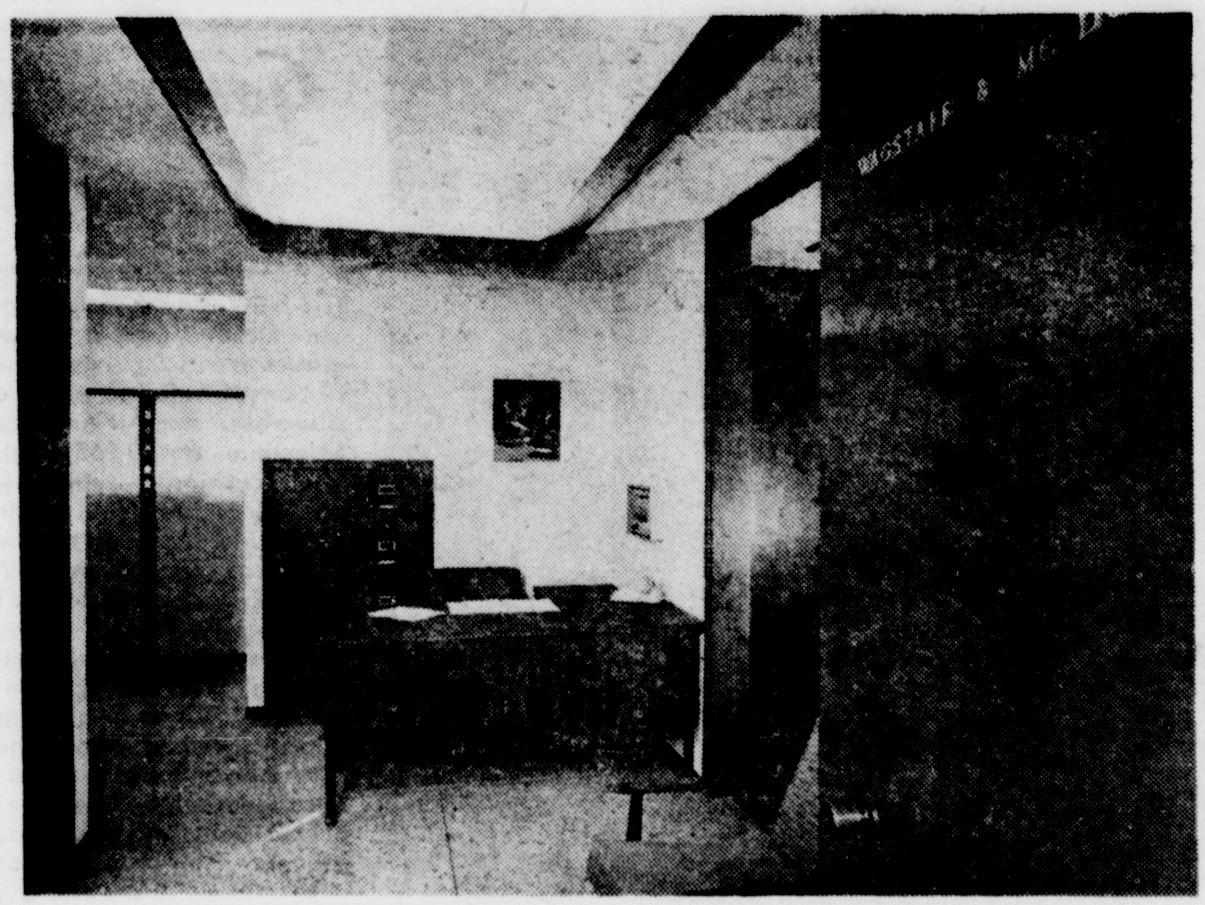
When the building design firm of Wagstaff & McDonald purchased a 50-year-old home at the corner of Ancha Vista and Redhill Avenue in San Anselmo, there was nothing about the structure to indicate a suitability for office use.

The house had been unoccupied for a number of years. It was overgrown and unkempt, and, says Harold Wagstaff of the firm, "it had about as much charm as the proverbial haunted house."

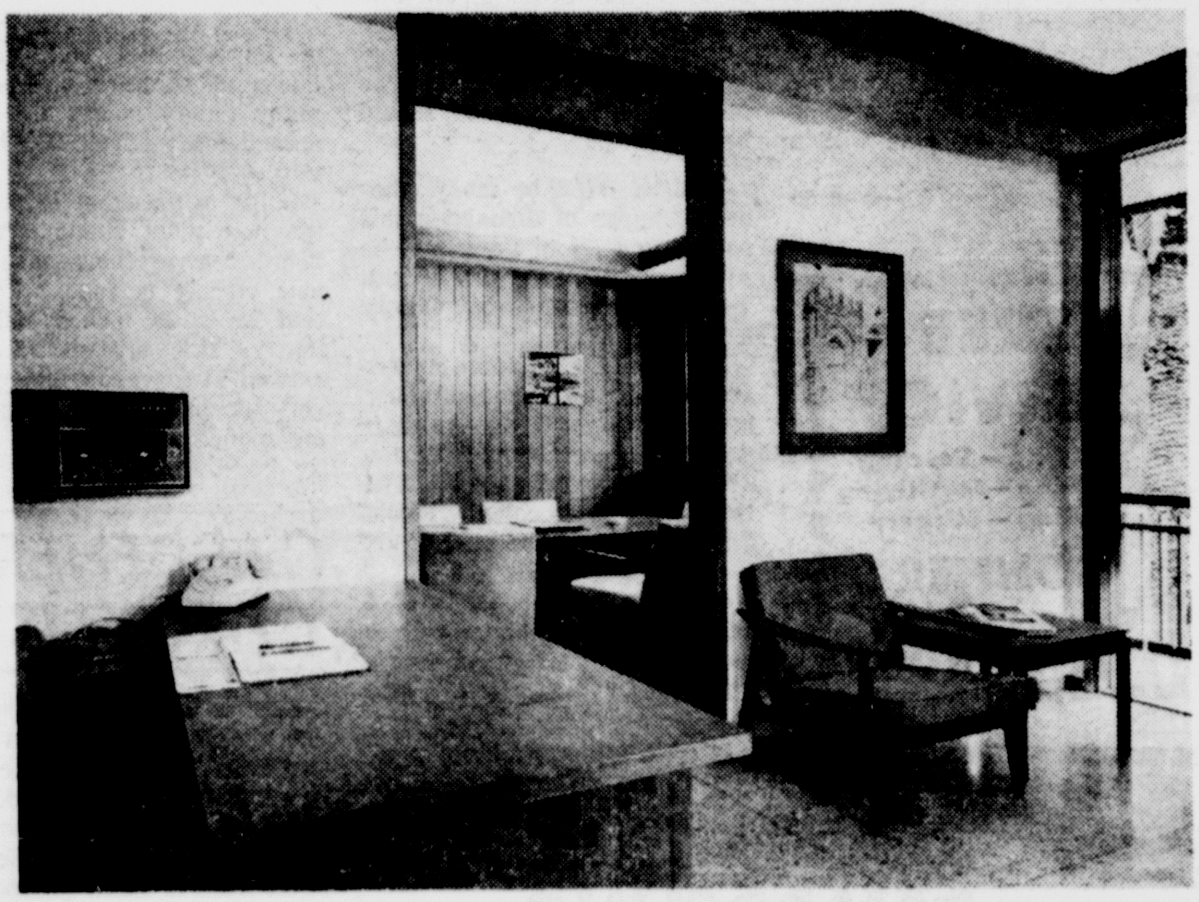
Vegetation was stripped away, superfluous ornamentation removed. And revealed was a sturdy structure with a good deal of early day warmth in the form of lofty ceilings and generous spaces.

A plan for floor use and remodeling was laid out by the partners. Then the old structure was jacked up into the air, and a new bottom floor constructed below. This created space for three offices, while the original structure was revamped into office suites, one of which was retained for the firm's own use, the other made available for rent.

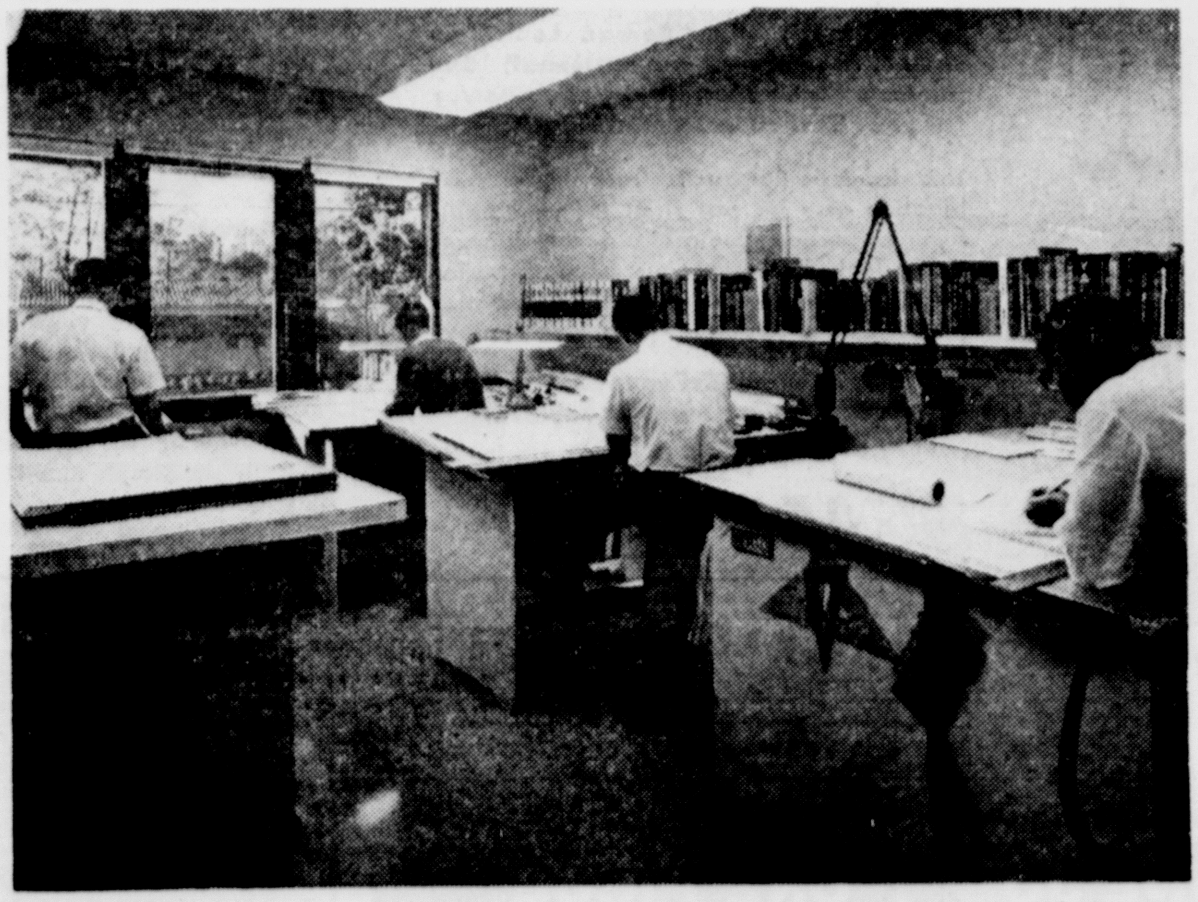
Landscaping and off-street parking arrangements were designed by landscape architect Henry Cole. The office construction was under the direction of general contractor Richard Pelton. And Cagwin & Dorward, landscape contractors, did all outside construction such as parking, walks, benches, curbs and plantings.



INSIDE THE OFFICES of Wagstaff & McDonald in the new facilities provided by the renovated house, you are looking from the main entrance and see the reception area with central "intercom" control panel behind the secretary's desk. All lighting is indirect from troffered areas above.



THIS VIEW LEADS Wagstaff & McDonald clients from the reception area into the conference room. The large eight-foot high opening is closed by a solid core "pocket" door that assures complete privacy for conferences and meeting held inside the room.



THE DRAFTING ROOM is the "heart" of the Wagstaff & McDonald organization, and is located in these quarters offering light, cheerful, spacious quarters. Five drawing tables occupy most of the terrazzo floor area. A ceiling outlet is for heating and air conditioning.

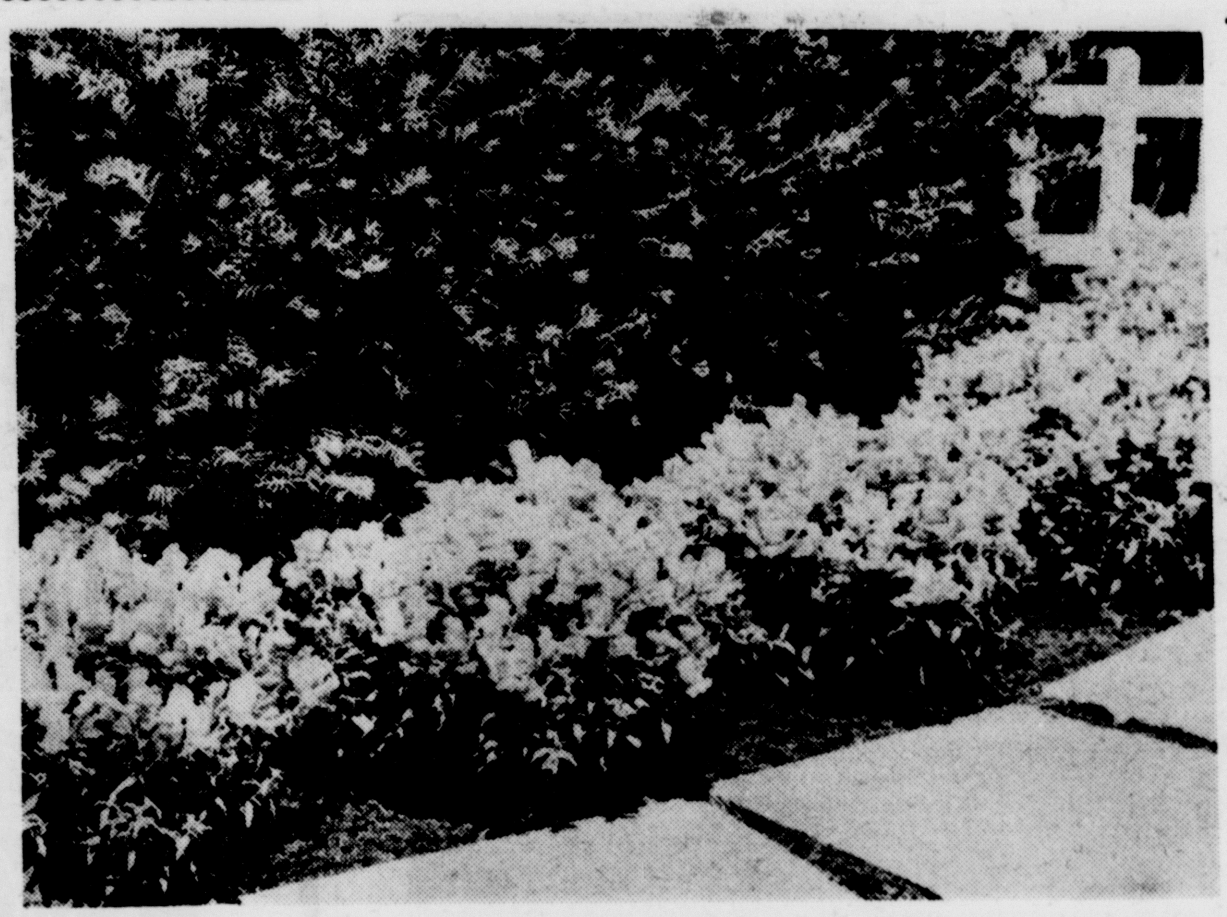
The New Faces For '65



Gardening Page

THE NEW dwarf snapdragon, Floral Carpet Rose, makes a bright, rose-pink ribbon of color to edge a sidewalk. An All-America Selection for 1965, this low, cushiony hybrid is ever-blooming in habit, producing three or more crops of bloom without cutting back the older spikes. It is one of many new flower varieties available in 1965 for gardeners who like to try something different. And the All-America label is assurance that the newcomer has been tested and has proven itself worthy of your time and energy.

Many gardeners like the idea of trying brand new varieties when they set out their bedding plants in spring.

A good source for new flowers are the All-American selections, according to the California Assn. of Nurserymen.

Outstanding this year is a new bushy delphinium called "Connecticut Yankee." Base-branching stems carry two-foot stalks of two-inch flowers in shades of blue, including lilac, lavender and purple.

SET OUT NOW from flats, Connecticut Yankee will bloom this summer.

It is suggested that this new delphinium be used as a medium-height background for lower-growing annuals, massed in a group by themselves or used as borders. Plants should be set in full sun in enriched soil and liberally supplied with the protection of snail and slug bait. The flowers are delightful, whether left uncut in the garden or taken for arrangements in the home.

Flower arrangers will enjoy "Connecticut Yankee's" modest stem length when working them into all types of floral displays.

IT WILL BE a dull spring when there is no new petunia qualifying for an All-American award!

This spring will be bright with a new variety called Appleblossom. It is a grandiflora hybrid, revealing the characteristics of a very select group of petunias. Plants are low and compact. Fringed flowers are large — three inches or more across—and the color is a popular light salmon - pink with a white throat.

Appleblossom will be no problem when it comes to finding a place for it in the garden. It is excellent for bedding, for borders, for window-boxes and containers of all kinds. It asks only two things—the soil should be fertile and the location should be in full sun.

THERE WILL be many other new petunias of distinction this spring (not all of them can be All-American), so check with your nurseryman for variety and color.

Practically all gardeners are acquainted with snapdragons, and use them freely in their gardens, but few know about the new race of dwarf "snaps." The 1965 selection is called "Floral Carpet Rose" and is truly dwarf —six to eight inches tall.

Conjure up a picture of a bright rose-pink ribbon of color that produces three or more crops of bloom in a season and think what a beautiful border it will make! That is "Floral Carpet Rose."

THINK OF A low-growing bed of flowers that will stay in flower all summer, and provide many dainty spikes for small arrangements. That is Floral Carpet Rose.

Going to the other extreme is the new giant zinnia, "Yellow Zenith." Everything about this new variety is robust — plants that grow 30 inches tall and flowers that are six inches across. Vivid yellow blooms are very double, with petals that are quilled and curled.

GARDENERS CHECKLIST

✔Bareroot planting time will be running out by the middle of March. Choose among the new varieties of roses now. Set out birch trees in small groups this month while they are dormant, and you'll be rewarded with fresh, lacy foliage as soon as the weather warms up.

✔It's time to put in groundcovers. For one you can forget about, once it's established, try one of the low-growing native ceanothus varieties.

✔Lawns will be coming to life, and this is a good time to feed the grass to get it off to a good start.

✔There is still time to plant a cover for bulb beds. Annual alyssum is quick and good at drawing attention from ripening foliage. Pansies and violas can be set out from flats. For a striking effect now and after the bulbs have faded, set blooming marguerite plants among your daffodils.

WEEKEND SHOWS

Unusual Interview On KQED

Non-commercial television Channel 9 presents an unusual interview at 9 o'clock tonight, with millionairess Fiona Campbell Walter, the Baroness von Thyssen, as the subject.

Alan Whicker of the British Broadcasting Co., who did such a superb job of conversing with J. Paul Getty on an earlier similar show, is again the second person involved.

At 8:30 p.m., KQED will salute Marin County with civic leaders on hand in its "A Stitch in Time" survey series of the nine Bay Area counties.

Jackie Gleason hosts Phyllis Diller on KPIX at 7:30.

Also scheduled for this evening: Basketball, California vs. Washington at 8 o'clock on KTVU; an appearance by Phil Silvers on "The Entertainers" on KPIX at 9; a "Hollywood Palace" lineup on KGO at 9:30 that includes Bette Davis, Barrie Chase and Julius LaRosa.

As for movies, KRON offers the Gene Kelly musical, "Les Girls," at 9, and a British mystery, "Chase a Crooked Shadow," at 11:25; KPIX shows "Inherit the Wind" with Spencer Tracy and Fredric March portraying Clarence Darrow and William Jennings Bryant at 11:15 p.m., and KGO has scheduled "Rififi" for 11:15.

A SUNDAY treat for the youngsters will be a repeat presentation of the animated musical fantasy, "Return to Oz," tomorrow at 5:30 p.m. on KRON.

"World War I" on KPIX at 6:30 offers a review of the most popular songs of that era entitled "Tipperary and All That Jazz." "Twentieth Century," on the same channel at 6 p.m., shows rare film footage about the World War II siege of Leningrad. Walt Disney offers another of his nature stories, "An Otter in the Family," on KRON at 7:30. And "Profiles in Courage" (KRON at 6:30) stars Janice Rule in a story set in the New England of the 1830s.

As for sports, the National Indoor Tennis Championships will be telecast on KRON at 11 a.m. Wilt Chamberlain and his Philadelphia 76ers face the Baltimore Bullets in pro basketball on KGO at 2 p.m. The "Sports Spectacular" on KPIX at 2:30 covers the AAU Indoor Track and Field Championships and the Westminster Kennel Club Dog Show.

How Furniture Style Winds Are Blowing

With the introduction of several major "country" collections of furniture, rusticity is again in vogue.

Offering the extremes from folksy casual to very formal, the country look spans the provinces of the world: Spain, France, Italy, Switzerland, England and America.

The 18th century provides inspiration for most of the formal groups, but many borrow motifs from the Renaissance, William and Mary and Charles II pièces.

The rural feeling is reflected in bold, often bulky designs, solid in character. Rugged woods such as oak, pine, pecan, maple, cherry and yellow birch are given rich, winey finishes. It often has the look of fine imported furniture, but boasts all the advantages of modern construction.

THE RUSTIC look has even extended into modern where it adds the warm flavors and earthy finishes to straight modern design.

To the surprise of many, so-called Spanish styles have continued in popularity. New lines often combine American Colonial and Spanish motifs for another country look that allows the homemaker to create a change in mood with a change in accessories or color scheme.

American Modern attracts more followers every year. While maintaining a clean 'n crisp design, it has rid itself of the clinical stigma. Several new groupings borrow from the Far East with fluid lines, an occasional Pagoda curve, subtle hardware and contrasting accents.

FOR THE purist there are excellent choices in modern designs which draw upon a finely textured fabric, a gentle curve or accented wood grain for warmth.

Styling in general continues its trend toward the heavy. Emphases is on man appeal—heavy scaling, rustic woods, dark finishes and the wide use of leather, mirror finished chrome hardware and over-scaled deep upholstery.

The ingenious design and sheer abundance of new storage pieces will delight modern homemakers.

Tall wardrobes, three-drawer night tables, modular bunching units (some replacing bedroom dressers), multiple purpose chests, wall-hung shelves, extension pieces are but a few of the many space/storage savers. Added to service is flexible design that allows many pieces to be used in a choice of rooms.

MANY OF these storage pieces belong to accessory groupings. More and more manufacturers are coordinating these occasional pieces with their major groups, not obviously matched, but related in basic design feelings.

Finishes are very light or very dark. One of the most talked about finishes this season is a chalky light color used on oak. The popularity of accent colors has produced many new colorful finishes.

AMONG THE many new materials seen this spring are: pewter, slate Formica which looks like slate but is much less heavy, printed wood patterns, steel and polished chrome, cork plastic encased split bamboo beads and cane, man-made marble and a variety of built-in electrical conveniences.

The thin, straight line of slabs of foam have been replaced by the fiber filled latex foam, which, added to the use of loose pillows, creates the plump look. Some molded shapes appear bulbous from the thickness of the foam pads used on the outside.

While any length sofa is available, the most popular length is short, often purchased with a twin or as a complement to a larger sofa.

The dining chair continues to gain in importance; it's growing taller, wearing more upholstery and receiving greater attention to details.

DRESSMAKER touches abound in all upholstery seen in gallooned skirts, wrap around pleated skirts on tub chairs, and and contrasting welting.

From basket weaves to nubby surfaces, woven fabrics are more popular than prints. Suedes, velvets, leather, vinyls and Renaissance-like matelasses are among the more fashionable coverings.

MODAVANTI

By Heritage®

Modavanti is richly inspired by the art and architecture of Italy, France and Spain; created from the most individual and adaptable of these forms, designed to give you the ageless beauty. A new world of decorating your home.

The Modavanti Hardware, Bold brass, subtly antiqued to a mellow glow, is custom designed by Heritage Craftsmen to emphasize the beauty of the classic styling. One piece is patterned after a Renaissance door knocker; another recaptures the Ribbon Tracery of early grille work.

Modavanti finish is a light-toned deep, clear finish. A non-acid bleach is used which preserves the best character of Cherry veneers. An oil-base stain reaches deeply into the wood leaving the surface clear and alive. A high clarity lacquer provides added protection and finish life.

Whatever your whim . . . whatever your mood . . . Bell's courteous, experienced decorators will be more than happy to assist you.

Bell's is a complete home furnishings store

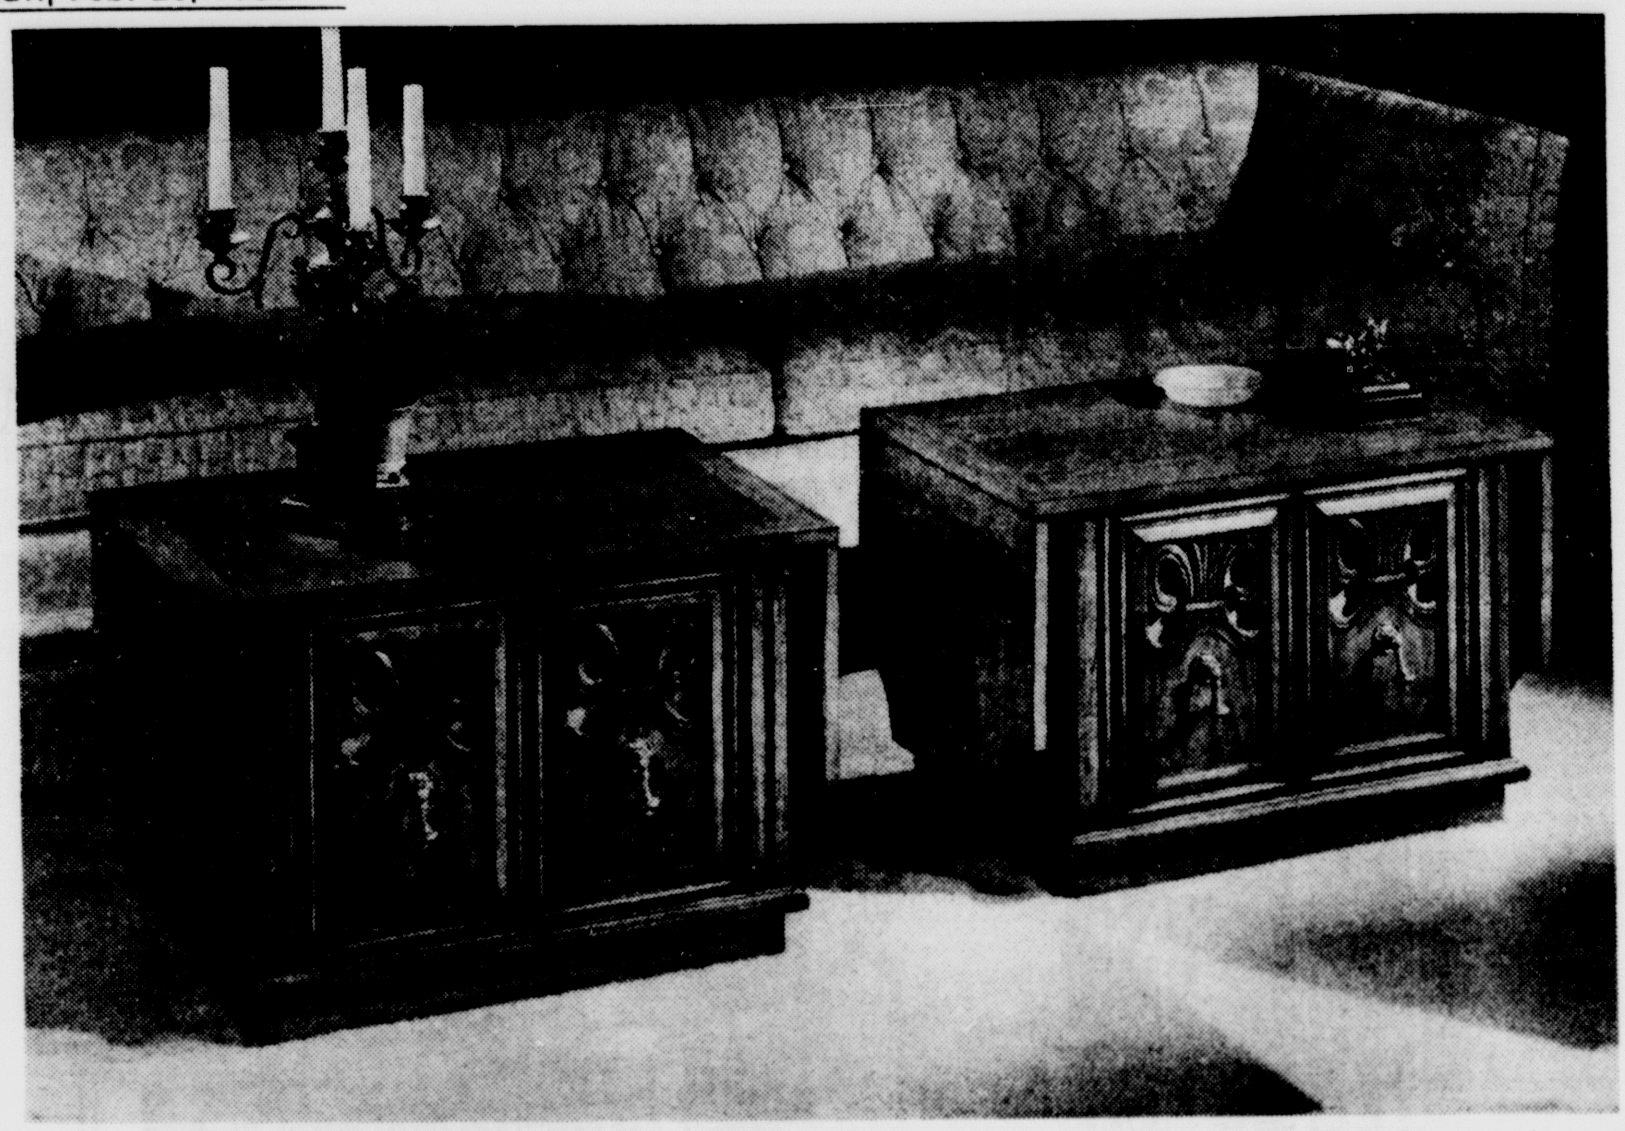
California Designers Speak Out

Our Mission Heritage Is Shown Anew



HANDCARVED COCKTAIL CARTS used here as a paired grouping illustrate the versatility of the Mediterranean period pieces that remain so popular. The carts, to be seen at Bell's Interiors of San Rafael, are each 27 inches wide with leaves opening to 55 inches. They can be used as end tables or as individual standing pieces that convert easily into a buffet. Fancher of Salamanca, N.Y., is the manufacturer of the solid walnut carts with handcarved fronts and gold-leaf back panel.

As the world around us grows smaller and nations strive to diminish their differences, the trend in home furnishings, too, indicates a growing unity that embraces the best of cultures from many lands and many periods.

This trend is dramatically evident in an informal survey of the new furnishings by California designers and manufacturers.

GOOD NEWS for the consumer is that competition among designers and manufacturers places primary emphasis on considerations of quality, comfort, and good taste. Generally absent are stylistic gimmicks and obvious efforts to come up with something "different." But this does not mean there is nothing new.

The 1965 crop of home furnishings is fairly bursting with fresh ideas, creative applications of new techniques, dazzling color and design concepts, and keenly individualized approaches to styling for an enlightened public.

Dominant among California manufacturers is the continuing evolution of a genuinely representative "California" style which pays tribute both to history and to current ways of life in the West.

AS CONCEIVED by the designer for one pace-setting California firm, the newest lines are primarily contemporary with overtones of "mission" ancestry. In addition is a continental sophistication appropriate to the jet age.

These pieces are heavier in weight, more massive in scale than previous contemporary furniture. The mission influence is apparent also in distinctive hardware, bleached walnut finishes, and an absence of carved ornamentation, the designs rather dramatizing the provincial quality of early California.

A dining group for example, features a large, expanding table based on two pedestals. These are formed of curved vertical members joined in a frankly planked effect, yet enormously graceful in the overall silhouette. Chairs are of two types, one with a slatted wood back that extends all the way down to the leg rails. The other is a three legged chair with an engaging horseshoe base.

The marriage of California's Spanish background with other cultures may be seen everywhere, although many manufacturers still prefer to describe the influence as Mediterranean.

As one manufacturer of upholstered groups states it, "We have contemporized the Mediterranean theme by simplifying the details and amplifying the scale. In aiming more toward comfort, we are using heavier foam and deeper seats."

Fabrics, too, reflect the trend toward simplicity or restrained elegance. Fewer sheen effects are used and weaves tend more to the linen look, luxurious but less formal, more practical and durable.

Many exciting contemporary prints are to be seen, along with a return to popularity of florals and Jacobeans. Colors this year are less brilliant; vibrant but with dulled finishes.

The importance of the Early California theme may be gauged from the fact that it appears now even in Early American furniture. The solid brass hardware on a line of chests and commodes, for example, turns up in the form of a sunburst, very Early American indeed.

The element of elegance is evident here also, with the crudity of the early puritan days giving way to the slightly later, more oppulent periods in New England history. More carved ornamentation is used and contours are more graceful, well suited to integration with other periods including contemporary.

Metal furniture, too, is achieving a grace and elegance that eprmits more flexibility in its use. As one top manufacturer reports, "We're treating it more and more like wood, with greater attention to fine points of ornamentation and, this year, heavy emphasis on chairs with high backs."

Metal plays an important role in the new lamps also, particularly in the wrought iron fixtures that go so well with the mission theme. Many of this "period" appear also in wood, sand blasted for a rustic finish and more attractive in mellow tones of olive or driftwood.

THE BEST news in lamps, however, is a dimmer series that includes large and small table lights as well as floor types and hanging fixtures.

In floor coverings the news runs to color: Richer, deeper hues that are particularly flattering to California furniture: Spanish gold, Mediterranean reds, deeper greens and stronger blues, all dramatic in themselves and more so in tweedy new combinations that create a three-dimensional effect.

Predictions based on orders so extensive they can't all be filled indicate an increased usage of wall to wall carpeting in 1965. Accent rugs will continue to grow in popularity.

MARIN CLEANERS Phone 454-4792 — Member N.I.D. of San Rafael, Bel Aire & Fairfax

"DID MY DRYCLEANER SHRINK MY DRAPES?"

Not necessarily. To undertsand shrinkage in some fabrics, it is necessary to know some rather technical things about fibers. Shrinkage may be influenced by the fiber content, the yarn construction, the type of fabric construction and the manner in which the fiber is treated in finishing it.

Generally, shrinkage takes place in garments or drapes from the "relaxation" of the fabric. In manufacture, fabrics are subjected to tensions which stretch them.

Moisture releases the tensions in yarns which relax and return to their original length. Unless a fabric is thoroughly preshrunk or specially treated in manufacture to resist shrinkage, some relaxation is likely to occur in drycleaning. This may not occur in a single cleaning because shrinkage tends to be cumulative. Humidity in a room will cause some fabrics to shrink. Curtains or drapes at windows often shrink with changes in relative humidity in the room.

So, your drycleaner may not have caused your drapes to shrink. Humidity in the room or relaxed fabric tension could bring about the same result. One good point about the newer synthetics including nylon, is that they do not absorb moisture and are not likely to shrink.

ONE WELL-CHOSEN piece of furniture of extraordinary merit can give just the needed lift to the decor of an entire room — or an entire house, for that matter. Such a piece is this superb table in a cloverleaf design of Italian Provincial by Mastercraft. Imported Italian burls finished in a heather color lend distinction to the table. The chairs are upholstered in a gold antique tufted satin. Mrs. George Biagini, a worker for the Junior Social Service Auxiliary, is seated at the table by Milton Schwartz of Casa Marin in San Rafael, where this fine table can be seen. (Photo by Ken Molino)

A Quiz To Test Your I.Q.

And A Booklet On Decor To Help You Pass

Is your home both decorative and livable?

Have you used imagination and decorating skill to create practical and comfortable surroundings for your family?

How high is your interior design I.Q.?

Here's a brief quiz prepared by the American Home Improvement Institute, national clearing house for design and building information, to help you rate your decorating know-how:

1. Is the furniture in your living room arranged in one or more groupings for convenient conversation?

2. Is there a definite, unencumbered traffic path through the rooms of your home?

3. Have you taken advantage of all storage opportunities in the bathroom, such as undersink and behind-door cabinets?

4. Would you be able to locate within three minutes any item stored in your home?

5. Have you created special activity areas with room dividers which create privacy while permitting some light to enter?

6. Do your interiors look equally attractive when viewed from at least four different points in each room?

7. Are lighting fixtures placed properly for comfortable reading in several areas in your home?

8. Have you rearranged any of your furniture in the past year to provide a change in appearance, even a small one?

9. Does your home's interior, regardless of its dimensions, have a spacious appearance?

10. Have you been a little adventurous and added at least one slightly off-beat accessory as an accent?

11. Has at least one do-it-yourself project been completed by you or a member of the family to help give your home an individual touch?

12. Have you successfully solved all decorating problems in your home?

If you were able to answer "yes" to between 10 and 12 of these questions, you may consider yourself among the best do-it-yourself decorators. If you scored between seven and nine, you still have reason to be proud. With a score of five or six, you might re-examine your home's interior and perhaps adopt some of the suggestions embodied in this quiz.

If you had fewer than five "yes" answers, you may find it worthwhile to expand your reading on decorating topics and perhaps discuss particular problems with a professional designer.

A free booklet presenting many decorative and practical interior design ideas is available (regardless of your quiz score) to anyone writing to "Idea Booklet," American Home Improvement Institute, 342 Madison Avenue, New York, N.Y., 10017.

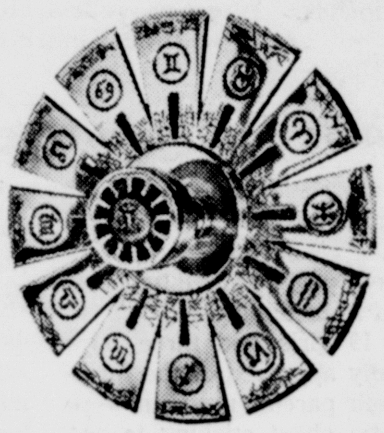
FOR THE DISCRIMINATING

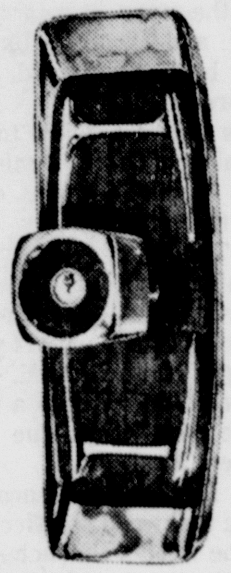
ARCHITECT—CONTRACTOR—HOMEOWNER

The search for something different in door hardware can be endless - - - obviously it is not to be found among mass produced items. The answer then, is to turn to the artisan, where the number of pieces is limited by the very fact that they are hand produced.



Shown here is a selection of original designs that can be used to highlight doorway design in outstanding residences and commercial buildings. Or you may choose to style your own lock trim. Schlage will transform it into metal beauty, hand cast in either solid brass or bronze. All designs are available in standard finishes as well as a wide variety of custom finishes.

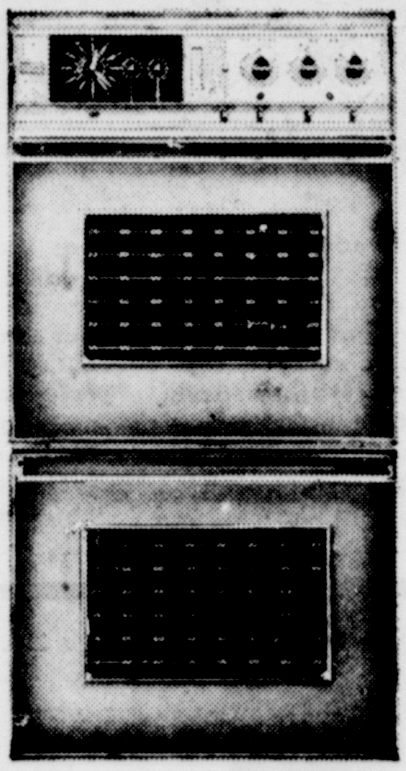
SCHLAGE LOCK COMPANY



WASTE KING UNIVERSAL

TAKES ANYTHING YOU DISH OUT!

Twelve-inch plates... oval platters...pots and pans...pitchers ...coffee pots...the new Waste King Universal dishwasher-dryer takes 'em all! Solid streams of detergent-activated water (distributed through stainless steel distributor arms) clean as no other dishwasher can. Complete washing action eliminates pre-rinsing and allows random loading. No matter how you stack 'em, you can be sure they'll come out sparkling clean and spotlessly dry ...For the best that money can buy—at a price that will delight you—get a Waste King Universal!



Programatic Cooking—The oven with Programatic control clock—watches for you and adjusts its own temperatures automatically to give you perfect results every time! You merely preset the upper oven as desired and it will automatically turn itself on and off. If you wish, instead of turning itself off, the oven will automatically adjust temperature down to "Keep-warm" setting you pre-selected and then hold food warm until you are ready to serve. You can use it for any two-temperature cooking—and even to defrost, then cook and keep-warm—all automatically.

Danish Furniture Makers Stick To Their Traditions

Danish furniture manufacturers have been steeped in lively discussions.

Should the furniture for export be designed with an eye to the special wishes or customs of the receiving country?

Should Danish furniture-makers, for example, analyze the American market and then produce special "American-style" furniture?

Should Danish furniture manufacturers keep track of West German trends in style furniture and try to cover this market or should they lean towards English tradition and deliver large, heavy sofas propped with cushions to Great Britain?

The discussions ended right where they started.

Danish furniture manufacturers stuck to their guns. Danish furniture wasn't simply a piece of merchandise, they felt, but an expression of a special way of life.

The living conditions and the climate of the Nordic countries have for hundreds of years made the home the center of all activities. Danes have always been vitally interested in giving their homes a certain atmosphere of quality. This is not only true of furniture but also of household utensils which are expected to last for a long time. Sensible, sturdy and practical articles have been the goal of the Danes.

DANES ADOPT TEAK AS THEIR WOOD

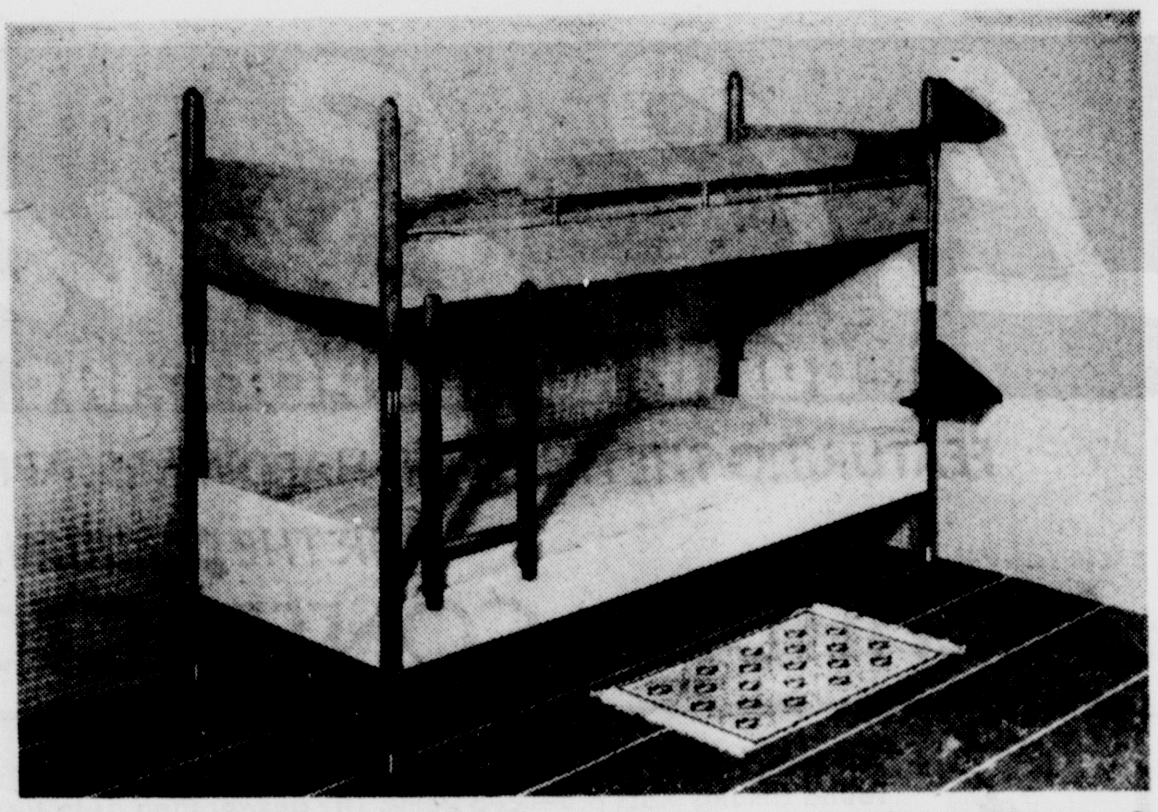
In the past 10 years teakwood and Danish furniture have been mentioned all in one breath.

It is almost possible to think of teakwood as a Danish national wood, in spite of the fact that it actually stems from Thailand.

Danish furnituremakers, however, were the first to recognize the density and strength of this wood. Since then teak has become a favorite the world over due to its excellent qualities.

The Danes have learned to handle teakwood so effectively that the wood's characteristics come to the fore. They have also learned to shape their furniture in such a way that the teakwood's constructional qualities are fully utilized.

One should, nevertheless, remember that Danish furnituremakers also use many other types of wood.



SCANDINAVIAN IMPORTS are these attractive bunk beds of solid teak frames. They measure a roomy 75 by 30 inches. On display at Scandinavian Designs, San Rafael, they are available in red, black, green yellow, blue, gray and white of washable hard-finish paint.

Youths Speak Their Minds On Furniture Preferences

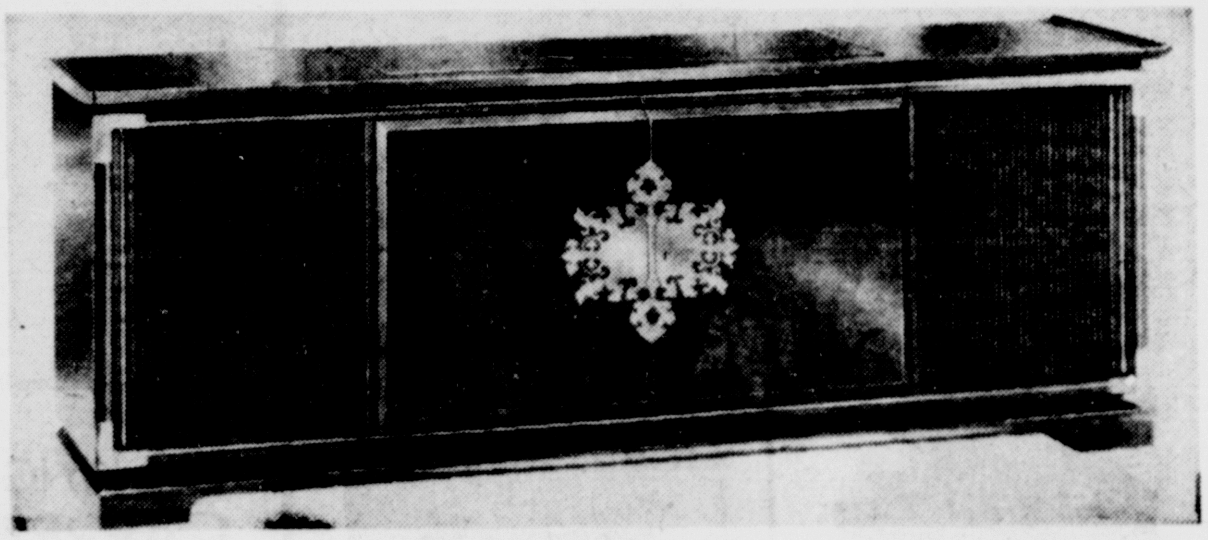
Furniture manufacturers are sizing up the buying tastes of more than 15 million children born in the United States between 1942 and 1946.

Ranging in age frofm 18 to 23, the World War II baby crop will soon be in the market for home furnishings.

The Kroehler Manufacturing Co., in a conference with 22 of the consumers-to-be, learned what the young adults, all products of post-war influences, wanted in furniture.

The 19 girls and three boys generally approved of the furniture their parents used but were emphatic about sticking to one style.

Comments included: "Mother has too much 'mix and match' furniture. She started out with one style and then switched to another, but has both in the same room," and, "There is too much clutter in our house; the furniture is too big and there is too much of it."



THE LATEST SYLVANIA stereophonic high-fidelity console—model SC817—makes a handsome addition to any home in an attractive Polynesian walnut cabinet of Oriental design. The model contains separate AM and FM tuners, four-speed stereoplayer with dual 1009 changer, diamond needle, and Pickering V-15 cartridge. The air suspension speaker system has six speakers with provisions for the addition of more external speakers. It can be used with tape recorder, both imput or output, and will accept a television outlet for improved sound with your TV reception. A built-in filter clears surface noise on old records. It can be seen at Klein Television and Electronics, San Rafael. Other Klein stores are located in San Anselmo and Sausalito.

Problems Of The One-Room Apartment

In furnishing a one-room apartment, money is less important than skill and thorough planning.

One impulse purchase that doesn't quite fit in becomes a lasting source of annoyance to the newly-married couple, the senior citizen, the bachelor or career girl whose home is an efficiency or studio apartment.

But how do you avoid such mistakes?

By considering the problem as a whole before you buy a stick of furniture.

YOUR MAIN challenge is one of combining the basic functions of eating, sleeping, and entertaining in a single room without creating clutter and confusion.

Obviously, you need a plan to meet such a challenge.

1. Arrange the room into groupings, set apart by the placement of the furniture and by dividers. For example, instead of putting a sofa against the wall, place it at right angles to the wall. Against the back of the sofa place a low buffet for china and linens.

In this way, the sofa faces one direction and forms a key piece for the lounging-entertainment area, while the buffet facing the opposite direction sets the little dining group apart.

You can do the same thing with room dividers, which are especially appropriate to mask off the dressing area of the apartment. Dividers with peacock-and-wisteria or philondendron patterns create a latticework effect to preserve an open feeling, and yet provide privacy.

2. Use mirrors to make the room seem larger. One large mirror is best, but several small ones arranged together as a single unit are also good.

3. If sleeping accommodations must also double for lounging, consider a right-angle arrangement of two studio beds. You can do this in a corner, with a square lamp table filling up the corner area. And you can do the same for a divider effect by placing one bed against the wall, the other at right angles to the wall as described earlier.

4. Choose light-scale furniture that's easy to move. Heavy, bulky looking futniture takes up more space and makes the room seem smaller. A lighter scale can be as comfortable, and yet contribute to the airy feeling of the room.

YOU MAY also want to consider buying furniture on easy-rolling casters to speed work on cleaning days.

5. Choose accessories with care. Too many small decorative details will clutter the room. Three or four large wall accessories are preferred to a scattering of smaller ones.

6. If you have abundant wall space, consider wall-mounted shelves and cabinets. If not, there are handsome stacking pieces that can double as space dividers. You can arrange either kind of furniture ceiling-high to provide needed storage space.

7. For added storage, use chests instead of tables. Small commodes can replace occasional tables for the sofa-beds and easy chairs. A bachelor chest can be used intsead of console table in the foyer.

8. If there's a large closet, turn it into a combination clothes and dressing room. Build a make-up shelf across one end of the closet, or install a small chest of drawers, along with a mirror and a good light.

10. Choose colors with care, especially wall and floor colors. For a small room, cool colors—blue, blue-greens, greens, violets—are preferred because they visually make the walls recede, objects seem smaller, and the entire atmosphere more restful.

HERE'S ONE answer to the problem of silverware storage—a stylish, compact chest. This one is from the new Young Family Collection by Basic-Witz, crafted in oiled walnut veneers with bandings of rosewood. It not only stores silverware, but doubles as serving table or plant stand, thanks to natural cleft slate top. Top three drawers are lined with removable protective silverware cloth for flatware; the fourth double drawer, also lined, is for serving pieces.

Persimmon Discovered By Makers

Furniture designers are always on the look-out for woods that best express the spirit of their creations.

Each designer tries to give his pieces a look of individuality and selects the hardwood, solid and/or veneer which will carry that different look into the home.

PERSIMMON trees have long been passed by as suitable cabinet wood. The wood has been used for large weaving shuttles and for heads of golf clubs. For these uses its hardness and strength were ideal.

Recently a few designers saw veneer sliced from the tall straight trees and recognized its color and texture are well suited to express the rugged feeling of Provincial or country type furniture.

The Fine Hardwoods Assn. says persimmon trees are a first cousin to ebony. While the name ebony suggests a black wood, the American persimmon has a light brown color with only occasional black streaks, forming a handsome pattern on veneer surfaces.

PERSIMMON has a medium texture, its grain is fairly straight and the wood takes a very smooth finish.

The botanical name of the ebony family is Diospyros which signifies the Greek god Zeus and wheat. It is known the Greeks obtained ebony from India prior to 350 B. C.

The American branch of the Diospyros family is called virginiana. However persimmon trees are found in several other states.

14 Project Plans For The House

An informative new do-it-yourself booklet, "14 Wonderful Ways to Decorate With Grillework," has been created to help decor-conscious homeowners seeking new and inexpensive ways to add texture and dimension to home interiors.

The 24-page illustrated booklet provides complete step-by-step instructions for using decorative and practical Panelaire hardboard grillework in the 14 "most desirable" home improvement projects.

Plans for the 14 projects, designed in response to the questions most often asked in the many thousands of letters that pour in to the American Home Improvement Institute, include robe closet, a storage wall, radiator enclosures suspended ceilings, kitchen cabinet modernization, folding screens and decorative lamps.

To receive a copy of "14 Wonderful Ways to Decorate With Grillework," sent 25 cents to cover printing and mailing to the American Home Improvement Institute, 222 Pacific Street, Newark 14, N.J.

A COLONIAL-STYLE custom sofa at Johnson's Red Barn in Novato offers quality construction throughout, and unquestioned eye appeal. Note the attractive wood detail. The sofa is available in select imported linen prints, or in heavily textured fabrics. Either way, it makes a handsome, dignified contribution to the living room decor.

How To Make Every Inch Of Space Count

Our predecessors would be as astounded with the technological advances in home furnishings as with television or jet travel.

Man-made materials, synthetic fibers, mar-resistant finishes — all were unknown before our time.

The Home Furnishings Industry Committee suggests that the chief benefit of our technology is the amazing quality offered at every price range. It has not been so long ago that wealth could not purchase the quality available now at moderate prices.

HIGH ON the benefit list is the "built-ins." Engineering storage, organizing space, serving multiple purposes, these built-in features make our homes more convenient and comfortable.

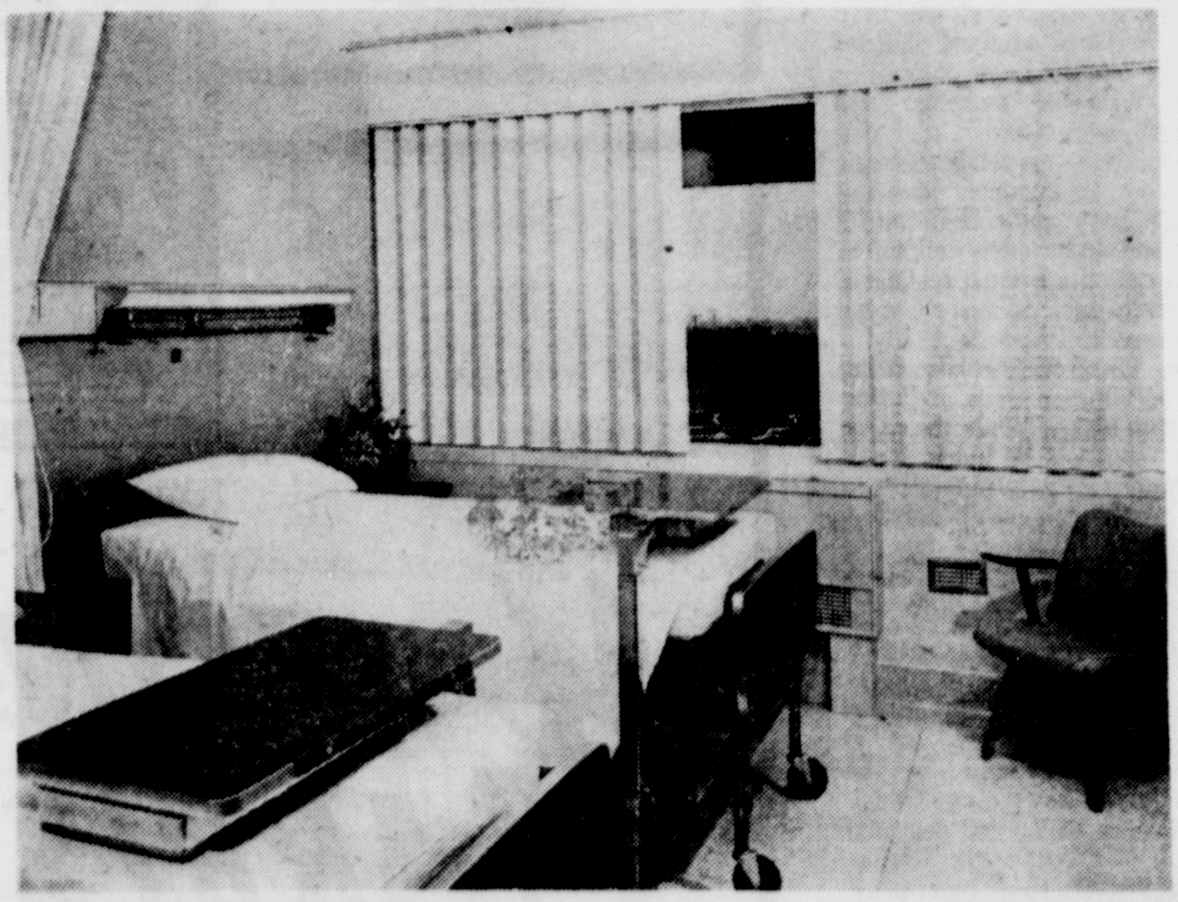
The philosophy of the built-ins seems to be: Make every inch count. With a touch, a headboard, arm or back adjusts for reading, sleeping, relaxing; a decorative chest opens to reveal bottle and glass storage, a small refrigerator and plastic topped shelf; a charming living room desk has tucked into its interior alloted space for a complete home office; the interesting molding on a buffet is actually a drawer for leaf-storage.

Interior lighting already appears on most chinas. One company recently introduced a collection that features interior lighting on all case pieces.

RADIOS, refrigerators, reading lamps, and electrical outlets in chests are being seen in more furniture every season.

Small tables that extend with ease to banquet length; chairs that swivel and rock, sofas that convert to beds; heavy case pieces on casters, magnetic doors that open and close with ease . . . and on the list goes.

For these built-in advantages we are indebted to the modern designer, the research laboratory and perhaps, most of all, to the manufacturers who are constantly exploring new and better ways to enrich our homes and way of life.



A REVOLUTIONARY NEW development in window treatment is Tropi-lite, conceived from Dow Verelite by Western Interiors Inc. and supplied by Shades of Marin of San Rafael and Novato. Available in pearl and translucent, Tropi-Lite is non-inflammable plastic that can be cleaned with a damp cloth and is practically indestructible. In the pastel shades of beige and turquoise, and white, it combines well with a variety of contrasting shades. Above, it is pictured in hospital use. But it is just as attractive and practical in the home.

ALL KITCHEN appliances look depressingly alike to you? Here's one that certainly doesn't. It's the built-in electric range and oven by Jenn-Air of Indianapolis that won the coveted "Best Design of a Consumer Product" award for 1964-65 from the American Iron and Steel Institute. The range, which can be seen at Rafael Appliance Co., San Rafael, has a surface unit of satin-finish stainless steel. It features odorless cooking without a hood. And when not in use, it closes up into an attractive and useful counter. The oven is wall hung directly over the range.

Steps In Selecting The Kitchen Colors

1. Isolate the colors that you like.

2. Choose a basic shade to create a color scheme.

3. Decide on an overall effect and combine the basic shade with accent colors and accessories that will achieve this atmosphere.

All color combinations can be reduced to three basic arrangements: matching, harmonizing and contrasting schemes.

WITHIN EACH of these, there is endless room for individual expression.

In a harmonizing color scheme, use colors which are closely related. For instance, many homeowners use a woodland green accent color in their paneling with light aqua or foam green planks to create an effective cool decor.

CONTRASTING schemes have basically exciting effects. There are three ways to obtain contrasting color arrangements.

You can use the darkest shade of a light color to produce an exciting contrast. Or you can take strong and weak variations of color and get contrast in the same color family.

The third way is to use a color and its complement.

More homeowners and interior designers are using woodgrain paneling in the kitchen. The wood should be considered a color when planning a new kitchen decor.

METAL GOES HIGH FASHION FOR DINERS

Like the now glamorous woman's winter boot, metal dining furniture is setting new home fashion trends with the introduction of a wide array of sets in contemporary, traditional, and provincial styles.

Equally dramatic, as the new sets depart further from their chrome-and-enamel kitchen origins, is the increased emphasis on pedestal styling in tables and chairs, plus the use of rugged fabric-backed vinyl chair covers and a colorful range of high pressure laminated table tops.

RECIPE FOR A HAPPY AND ATTRACTIVE HOME

1 home (new or old, small or large, any style).
1 family with a yen to decorate.
A pinch of ingenuity.
Barrels of decorating know-how.
Smart new furniture, fresh from the market.
Dash of color, bright sparkle of metal.
1 or more pairs of willing hands.
1 budget, be it ever so small.

Thoroughly mix home and family. Let stand until family rises to the occasion of decorating needs. Combine pinch of ingenuity with a large quantity of decorating know-how borrowed from the experts.

Season to taste with beautiful new home furnishings available. Add a dash of color and tangy metal accents in tasteful draperies, upholstery and smart accessories. Don't forget a new lamp or two to make the recipe light. Use willing hands throughout. Blend all ingredients well. Pour into the budget. This may be done by degrees, if necessary. Makes one million servings of satisfaction for the modern, forward-looking family.

THE COMMODA DE FLORES, a bold, simple chest, with handcarved flower details, is an authentic copy of the provincial Spanish colonial era, and is part of the Mexican Cottage Collection of decorative pieces to be seen at Braverman's in San Anselmo. The chest is finished in chapapote. The three-panel screen behind the chest is finished in blanco-de-Espana and gold leaf. Both sides of the screen are finished equally, with handcarved shield appliques and framed antique mirror inserts. Mexican artisans have employed techniques once considered "lost arts" to produce exciting, individualistic detail without the assistance of machines. Primitive, historic finishing techniques are also employed. The result, says Braverman's, is the romantic air of Old Mexico, ready to be brought into the Marin home. (Photo by Ken Molino)

CLOSETS FILLED?

Look To Furniture For More Storage

Neatness is a virtue that gets harder and harder to maintain in our acquisitive society.

You don't have to hire a research firm to find out what happens to those spacious closets the real estate salesman brags about. Any housewife knows how quickly they fill up.

The Home Furnishings Industry Committee suggests that you look to proper pieces of furniture to help you solve storage problems.

TODAY furniture designers are so storage conscious, they even make lists of the various items likely to be stored before they begin to design the furniture. So you'll find a wide variety of cabinets, chests, bins, hutches and so forth, in many sizes to help you solve your own particular problems.

Suppose you are a young couple with a small apartment. You don't have a lot of furniture, but you do have a carload of wedding presents, or so it seems when you look at the cabinets in the kitchen.

"A GOOD solution for you," designer Paul Browning of Stanley Furniture Co. suggests, "might be a piece of furniture which would separate the dining area from the living room and at the same time provide ample space for storing table things and all those wedding presents.

You can choose one whose base may be used as a buffet and serving counter. Ample cabnets below and a hutch above with drawers, cupboards and open shelves, can take care of an astonishing array of equipment. Such a piece finished front and back, can stand free in the room and look well from both sides.

WHEN YOU choose your living room furniture, keep storage in mind.

What things do you need to store, how big are the objects? Are they decorative accessories and collections? Will you be storing blankets or linens which need the protection of tightly closed drawers or cabinets? Or are most of your things merely the kind of objects that anyone would want out of sight, no matter how necessary they may be?

You might consider some of the many pieces of furniture designed to give architectural interest to a room as well as provide storage space. Used in the living room, a pair of high cabinets with glass doors will give you considerable space for books and bric-a-brac, while drawers or cupboards below can hold all kinds of less decorative items.

If the area is wide enough a credenza instead of the usual console table or bench, will add an unbelievable amount of extra storage space. It can lighten the load on the coat closet, or can hold serving things too big for the kitchen or dinette cabinets. You can also store those overflow records, magazines and books from the living room in the hall.

In the modern small apartments, today so frequently built with L-shaped living rooms, there are several ways to gain more storage space without going to the expense of building in elaborate units which must be left behind when you move.

Most apartment floor-plans are laid out on the assumption that the smaller L area will be used as the dining room. Since this area is often too small to accommodate more than the table and perhaps a small buffet-server, Browning suggests a switch on the use of this space when additional storage is needed. He has designed an octagon shaped 44 by 44-inch table for dining. Twenty-six inches high, it works equally well in the living as in the dining room and can double for entertaining, dining, for games and projects.

MAKING storage pieces adaptable for changes from room to room is one of the important concerns in designing furniture. Interior fittings, such as trays and adjustable shelves, help convert a piece from one kind of storage to another.

IT'S TIME TO THINK about new outdoor furniture for the patio. From Brown-Jordan comes this 30-inch round glass-top table, ideal for the smaller decks and terraces, or for use in the apartment home. The set comes in many colors for the frame and cushions. And it's available at Steele's in Corte Madera.

Our Chairs Today Are Rock 'n' Roll

Chairs no longer just sit there —they do something.

They swivel, they recline, they rock and roll around on casters.

All this is a big change from a few years back when "living room chair" invariably meant dad's big easy chair which just sat in the same corner all the time. It may still be there, but now all the other chairs are apt to be in orbit around it.

THE HOME Furnishings Industry Committee points out that the new mechanical-chairs are keyed to the smaller living rooms in today's modern homes and apartments, where double duty is a must. They're flexible and can be moved into a conversational grouping when company comes without any wear and tear on either muscles or decor.

Double-duty is undoubtedly the reason for the popularity of the mechanically operated reclining chair. When nobody's lounging, it doubles as another straight chair.

While rocking chairs have never really been out of style, they're currently enjoying a fashion renaissance. You'll be seeing all kinds of rockers in the furniture stores this Fall in all kinds of styling effects, from traditional to Provincial and slim-lined modern.

But the new twist in rockers is the wide array of mechanically-equipped ones that do more than just rock. They also turn freely in all directions with the help of sturdy metal swivels combined in one fixture with resilient metal springs which provide the rocking action.

Furniture makers are now offering platform rockers and high-leg or low-leg rockers that blend into any room, no matter how formal or modern.

THEY NEVER need servicing and they assure a smooth, silent rocking action even when they are used all day long, every day of the week.

After you've left the doctor's office, where you've probably been urged to exercise more, it's only a hop, skip and jump to the furniture store. There you'll find a whole "gymnasium" of healthful exercise in the rocker section!

THIS CHAIR OF handsome, genuine leather upholstery, as designed by H. W. Klein, rocks and reclines, and can be locked into five different positions for the individual comfort of the occupant. The base is of Bangkok teak. It is available in wool fabric or naugahyde, as well as leather, and in a variety of attractive colors. It can be seen at Mobilia, San Rafael.

Stereo Hi-Fi

By C. J. Catania
Audio Engineer

FURNITURE FOR STEREO — With custom component type music systems becoming increasingly popular for the home, the cabinetry to house the components has become more plentiful and more beautiful. The days of having wires scattered all over for hooking up tuners and amplifiers and record changers and speakers are long gone. Now, it is easy to have excellent stereo sound in your home, and at the same time have a beautiful decorative piece of furniture to house the music system.

The BARZILAY Sarabande Collection is truly furniture at its best. The furniture, designed by Charles Van Sloten, reflects the best of European styling and Old World hand-craftsmanship. Each piece has a one-of-a-kind look with rich carvings of solid wood and careful detailing. This collection of Barzilay furniture is engineered to accomodate quality components. The loudspeaker cabinets are fully inclosed and lined with fibre-glass. The wood for these speaker sections is resonant-free, especially engineered particle board, produced under extreme pressures and temperatures, and veneered with the finest hand picked walnut.

THE SEVILLA, a massive solid oak Spanish console will enhance the appearance of any home. Hand-carved rosettes of solid oak serve as handles for the doors. End doors over the built-in enclosures fold flat against the sides. Words and pictures cannot describe the exceptional workmanship and authentic character of this cabinet, so if you are interested in seeing the elegance of this Spanish piece visit our stereo center.

The Barzilay Acanthus console recalls to mind the ancient Mediterranean civilizations with the accent on solid walnut leaf carvings. This features doors covering the entire front with no grill cloths visible, heavy brass pulls, and a carved pedestal base. Finished in antique walnut, this furniture will make your home come-alive.

For those who appreciate the best in classic cabinetry, the Barzilay Sarabande will provide quiet elegance and authentic character to the finest living rooms. There are many models to choose from, and they are available in several finishes. Are you afraid of the price? Don't be. Drop in and let us make a suggestion.

Excitement Underfoot In 1965

"Excitement underfoot" is the theme for 1965 as set by carpet and rug manufacturers who have unveiled their new styles.

The growing importance of carpets and rugs in home decor has been emphasized in the broader variety of textures and colors, in patterns keyed to major home furnishings trends and even in new flooring innovations.

PRODUCT technology and design are always inseparable; but this fact is especially pointed up in forward-looking styles revealing new industry developments — a greater freedom of choice in fibers, new dyeing techniques and construction methods.

New interest in texture is a major theme in the 1965 introductions. Whether looped, plush or twisted, the new carpet surfaces reveal a trend to texture as a style note on its own.

"PLUSH BUT practical" is the theme of many new styles in a wide variety of random-sheared or tip-sheared textures. Combinations of cut and looped yarns are seen in both casual and formal stylings.

Shaggy, tousled textures have also gained importance, styled with a fresh viewpoint to complement either the sleek lines of contemporary furnishings or the scale of sophisticated "country" decor.

TEXTURE interest is accompanied by the broad spectrum of color which is now accepted as basic in carpets and rugs.

Rich, deep tones in the blue-green family, vibrant versions of red and a noteworthy number of lively blues are also seen in the new styles. Browns are on the warm side, often with a coppery glint, and a number russet, amber and henna hues are seen.

IN ADDITION to lively, sparkling colors, there are a number of soft muted hues. "Muted," however, definitely does not mean "grayed" — as evidenced by the clear, cool versions of blue, green, alabaster and celadon shades.

Name your decorating preference — then pick your patterns. There are new carpets and rugs to underscore all the major design trends in furniture and fabrics, from Early American to abstract modern, from classic traditional to Mediterranean, Spanish or country styling.

BOLD PATTERNS are seen in both area rugs and carpeting — with a number of styles available in either form.

Interest in area rugs continues, as does the variety in size and shape. With the broadened range of sizes, many new area rugs will be used in "room-size" form.

Smaller rugs are produced in qualities and designs which put them in the category of an art form, whether used singly, in pairs or trios, or over wall-to-wall carpet as a colorful accent.

PATTERNS — whether achieved by weaving, tufting or technological developments in dyeing — are clearly defined in style. For contemporary settings, there are rugs with bold blocks of color, precise geometric designs or the authentic reproduction of animal skins, including zebra, tiger and leopard.

Floral patterns have been executed in both traditional and contemporary forms; stripes and sunbursts of color are represented, as well as intricate patterns inspired by historic periods in decorating.

Variations in color, texture and pattern reflect the development of fibers now used in carpets and rugs.

CURRENTLY, nylon in both staple and continuous-filament form is the most widely-used fiber, accounting for approximately 40 per cent of total production, followed by wool and the acrylics.

The 1965 introductions also include new carpets made of polypropylene olefin and area rugs in rayon and cotton.

Polypropylene is also being used in carpet backing fabrics, in addition to jute and kraftcord.

A SUBTLE HARLEQUIN pattern is seen here in a new fringed rug. But like many rugs, it is also made in broadloom carpet widths for wall-to-wall installation. Coloring is in orange, gold and brown tones.

A NEEDLEPOINT EFFECT is achieved in this carpet as higher loops trace a floral design against a tightly-looped background. It points up a continuing interest in pattern on the floor.

Pitfalls To Be Avoided

Mistakes made in buying carpets and rugs can be expensive, as well as frustrating.

Fortunately, however, the margin for error can be eliminated with some attention to individual home needs and some easily-obtained knowledge on these important items of home furnishings.

Experts in the field have pointed out three major areas in which carpet and rug purchasers might go wrong—and ways to be sure you're right.

FIRST ON the list is color. If you're going to live happily forever after—or at least for a number of years equal to your investment—with a rug or carpet, you must be satisfied with its appearance.

It's essential to pick a carpet or style you really like. Perhaps it's not so surprising that more mistakes can be made on the side of timidity than otherwise!

Choosing a lively color, an interesting pattern or a distinctive color-texture design might seem like a big step—but it's far more rewarding than a "compromise" for a nondescript style that does very little for other home furnishings and less for your morale.

IF YOU'RE starting from scratch with a new carpet or rug, you'll find many new styles to inspire room decor.

If you're choosing a style to perk up an already-furnished room, check existing colors carefully. Take color chips or fabric swatches along when you go shopping. If you have carpet samples, consider them in the room where the new carpet will be.

Better yet, take advantage of the in-home shopping service offered by many stores, and ask a trained decorator-salesman from the store to call with swatches from which you can make your selection.

SECOND, BE honest about traffic requirements. You don't have to count foot steps to analyze the amount of wear your carpet will get—but do consider basic room uses. There's obviously a big difference between the traffic in a guest bedroom and a living room used daily by a large family.

Don't try to "get by" with a lesser quality than you need. The most expensive carpet may actually be the most economical in the long run, since it will last longer and look better than a cheaper grade.

One retail store has the slogan that "only a rich man can afford cheap carpet" — a point well worth considering.

THIRD, consider total carpet performance and value. Making a carpet decision on the basis of a single factor usually results in a mistake.

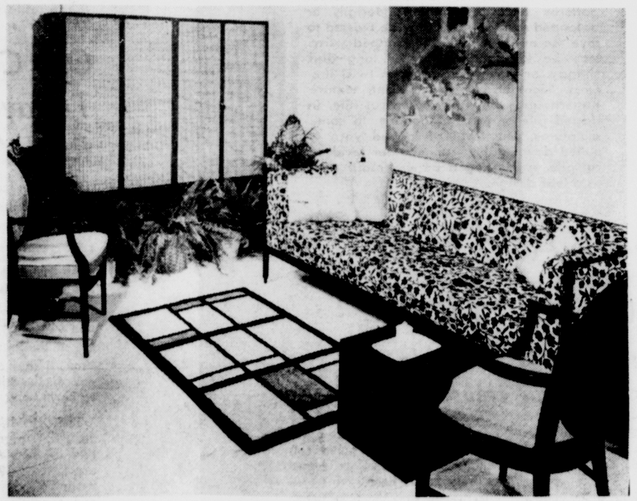
For example, the home owner who selects a carpet because "a friend has one just like it" may be disappointed. This reason may be valid in some cases, but on the other hand, practical and decorative requirements for furnishings vary from house to house. Choose a carpet or rug with your own family's needs and preferences in mind.

Remember that no single factor is responsible for carpet performance or value.

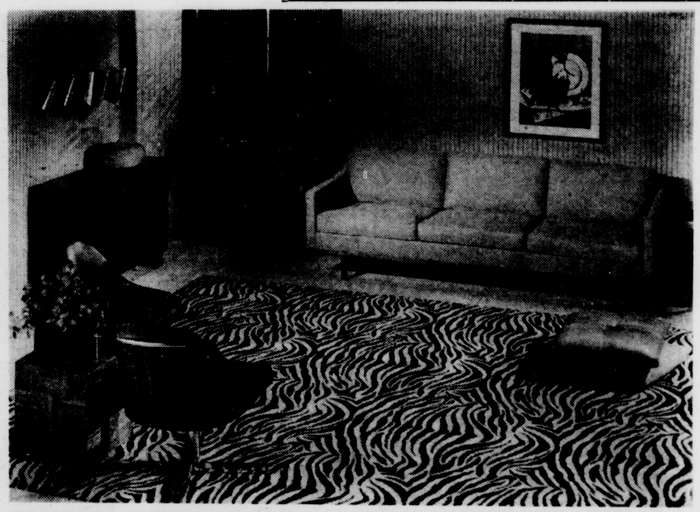
FIBER content, for instance, is important but does not by itself guarantee quality. Durability is desirable, but it's neither necessary nor wise to buy a carpet that will "last a lifetime" if you don't like the style.

You'll avoid both major and minor mistakes by considering a carpet or rug as a finished product—from the dual standpoint of practicality and beauty—remembering that value depends on performance in relation to price.

With this guidepost in mind, you'll get what can really be called a bargain—a long-term investment in beauty and comfort for the home.



THE AREA RUG can be the focal point of an attractive room decor. Here the decorator has capitalized on the color of this rug in big blocks, smartly set off by black borders. The rayon area rug has turned the entire furniture grouping into a very special setting. And the rug is completely machine washable.



THE NATURAL STRIPINGS of a zebra skin, faithfuly reproduced in an area rug, form the crisp accent for a contemporary living room. The same "Safari" group also includes tiger and leopard skin patterns.

FLEXIBLE FLOOR design can be created with "Rugtile"—13-inch squares of carpet bonded in polystyrene plastic tile bases with edges designed for interlocking. Wood-grained vinyl on the same base can also be interlocked with carpeted surfaces.

Rugs And Carpets Add Note Of Luxury Throughout Home

Their Comfort Underfoot Is Available For Every Room In Your House

Who says that comfort and eye-catching decor have to be limited to just a few special rooms?

Certainly not the increasing number of homemakers who now see some "luxury" materials in a new light and use them throughout the house.

A fresh awareness of what practicality really means may account for one of the biggest "trends" in carpets and rugs—the new and varied uses for these familiar home furnishings items.

CARPETED kitchens and bathrooms offer just two examples. The idea of carpet in these areas may once have been in the category of "I love the luxury—never mind whether it's practical." Actual experience, however, has pointed up a more realistic, down-to-earth approach.

Homemakers have found that the acoustical properties of carpet are a boon in the kitchen filled with activity, especially when the kitchen is part of a family room. The warmth and soft comfort of carpet are of prime importance in the bathroom—and the safety factor has not gone unnoticed in either area.

As for ease of maintenance, the vacuum cleaner has superseded the mop, and spot-cleaning even in these spot-prone areas is no problem.

CARPETING in kitchens and bathrooms may be a permanent wall-to-wall installation, as in other rooms, or may be put down in "room-fit" fashion.

With the latter method, carpeting is cut to fit the room exactly, including any jobs and corners, and bound if necessary to prevent frayed edges. It is then simply laid as a rug would be, including padding, and can be taken up for cleaning or moved to another location as easily as a rug.

If furniture is used on the carpet, as it generally is in a kitchen, the room-fit rug would stay securely in place.

IF THE RUG shows any tendency toward slipping or corner-curling, simple techniques can be used for security. Double-sided masking tape is a temporary, but effective, means of holding rug corners or edges securely to the floor.

Bathroom rugs, such as lightweight cotton rugs, may be fitted completely around fixtures or cover most of the floor if a single large rug is used.

One ingenious homemaker used several rectangular cotton rugs fastened together with large grip fasteners as a practical means of carpeting the bathroom almost completely. This room-fit method is especially practical if bathroom rugs are of a size to be machine-laundered.

A COMPLETE wall-to-wall installation is usually most satisfactory if a dressing room area or kitchen adjoins a carpeted room. The result is one unbroken carpet surface for easy vacuum-cleaning and on-location cleaning when necessary.

Regardless of the type of rug or carpet installation method, the barriers have been broken. Comfort and luxury now go hand-in-hand with practicality—from the floor up.

Swivels Give You Flexibility

Furniture That Moves Is Versatile

No one knows for sure who invented the swivel.

Like the wheel, whose principle it uses, it goes back deep in history. The term first gained currency in the 14th century, apparently deriving from the Icelandic "sweifla," to swing, and the medieval English "swifan," to revolve.

But everyone knows for certain that the swivel has become an important component of virtually every kind of modern furniture.

Market analysts at the Seng Co., Chicago and Los Angeles, a creator, designer and producer of mechanical units for all kinds of office and domestic furniture, point out that swivels are now being used in a dozen different types of chairs in heavy, medium and light-duty classes.

They point out that lounge, club, tub, fan-back, pull-up, occasional and high-base chairs are now employing swivels where once they were stationary chairs only. Swivel-rockers and swivel-tilt chairs have long been growing in popularity, too.

NOR ARE chairs the only furniture items that have been functionally improved by the addition of a mechanical turning action. Tables, such as television, coffee, cocktail, outdoor and patio tables, now revolve. One of the most classic of all, the drum table, started out as a swiveling piece.

Stools of many kinds, with or without backs, now lean heavily to swivels. Bar stools for recreation and family rooms and a great variety of kitchen stools are in this class.

Piano stools, which turn on spindles rather than on swivels, were among the first revolving furniture.

A GOOD many other pieces of furniture and home furnishings have been made more versatile with the addition of a turning action. These include lazy susans, revolving shelves for books or bric-a-brac, china and kitchen cabinets, tool cabinets for the home workshop and other pieces of cabinetry.

When you add it all up, chairs or other pieces of furniture that "just sit there" no longer satisfy some homemakers. Swiveling actions add that extra touch of movement and of versatility that so noticeably enhances the furniture's use.

Checklist To Help Rate The Bedroom

Since the average American spends a third of his life in bed, why shouldn't bedrooms rate at least as much attention as other rooms in the house?

Most bedrooms are expected to serve as much more than just a place to sleep. So they should be planned and equipped accordingly.

TO DETERMINE how well your own bedroom measures up against today's standards of boudoir luxury, score it according to this 20-point checklist:

For sleeping:

1. Is it dark and quiet enough for you to fall asleep easily?

2. Is the year-round temperature conducive to easy, restful sleep?

3. Is your mattress even and free of lumps or low spots, especially through the center section from shoulder to thighs?

4. Does your bed support your body firmly and comfortably without rocking or swaying when you move?

5. Is your bed large enough for you to stretch out full length without crowding yourself or your mate?

6. Do your sheets and blankets stay smoothly in place?

7. Does your pillow really suit you?

For good grooming:

8. Is there adequate closet and drawer space?

9. Are there proper mirrors for close-up and full-length viewing?

10. Is the lighting (day and night) adequate for putting on make-up, checking condition of clothing, and matching up colors?

11. Are grooming aids such as clothes brush, shoe brushes, etc. handy?

12. Are windows draped or shaded to provide privacy when you need it?

For living convenience:

13. Is there a telephone for emergency use or privacy when you want it?

14. Do you have adequate light and a comfortable spot for reading, sewing, writing, or enjoying a hobby?

15. Is there a radio and/or TV for you to enjoy in privacy?

16. Do you have a bedroom bookcase, magazine rack, or both?

For pure pleasure:

17. Is the color scheme one you really like?

18. Is there carpeting or at least a rug to pamper your feet when you get out of bed and can't find your slippers?

19. Is there a spot where you can relax with coffee in the morning or a snack at night?

20. Is furniture arranged as conveniently and attractively as possible?

SCORE FIVE points for each "yes" answer. If your score is 90 or more, you're living and sleeping in the lap of luxury. A score of 80-85 means your bedroom is better than most, but there's room for improvement. Scores of 70-75 rate your bedroom as average.

Any score below should send you scurrying off to your department or furniture store, and possibly your paint store, to begin giving your bedroom the lift it needs to make life more pleasureable.

A good starting point is the mattress itself. Most authorities will recommend a mattress with a soft sleeping surface for comfort plus inner firmness for proper body support.

In addition, each person should be sleeping either on a twin-size bed (39-inches wide) or, if two share a bed, the mattress should be queen-size (60 inches wide) or king-size (78 inches wide).

Carpets Can Reduce Cost Of Remodeling

If you are renovating an old house, or just one room, carpeting the floors can be a real money saver.

Many floor faults can be concealed with carpet eliminating the need for costly floor repairs. Major faults can be corrected by filling cracks or sanding ridges. Then use a rug cushion to counteract minor imperfections.

The Big Bed Is Making A Comeback

Many home builders are reversing a trend of many years—that of the large living room and the small bedroom.

Bedrooms, especially master bedrooms, are bigger than they were five years ago.

The reason is that bedrooms are now a combination living room, office, sewing room or den. There also is a trend toward oversize beds.

Building authorities and interior designers say the modern family wants to use every room completely, including the bedroom. To accommodate these wishes, the bedroom size must be enlarged.

Some modern bedrooms now are as large as the home's living room—14 by 18 feet is not uncommon.

The equalizing of size of the living room and the bedroom has transformed the living room into more of a parlor, and the bedroom into a multi-purpose room.

This is especially applicable to homes in the $19,000-$25,000 range, according to the National Assn. of Home Builders.

Buyers of these homes usually need and want family rooms, and also big master bedrooms to which the parents can escape and use as a private living area.

The bigger master bedroom almost always has an adjoining private bath. Here, too, in higer-priced homes, adults have taken steps to add comfort and convenience.

Some have installed a sink, cabinets and coffee bar in the private bath, so the head of the family may enjoy their morning coffee while dressing. Some homes even feature a complete kitchenette.

The second, third and fourth bedrooms are becoming larger and the once-common nine-by-10-foot bedroom most often is a fourth bedroom, or den.

Mattresses that are either longer or wider, or both, than the standard 54-by-75-inch double bed, are a significant trend.

One national manufacturer said oversized bedding now accounts for almost 25 per cent of its total sales. Almost half of the oversize sales are in extra-length twins (39 by 80 inces) and extra-length regular mattresses (54 by 80 inches), allowing for the average increase in American height since 1900 of two inches. Queen size (60 by 80) and king size (76 by 80) account for the remainder.

Both larger bedrooms and oversize bedding reflects increasing comfort, luxury and general affluence, but neither is new.

The lady of the house established her headquarters there and usually decorated it without considering her husband's preferences.

Oversize beds date back even earlier. England's famed "Bed of Ware," made for King Edward IV, measured 18 feet, six inches by 12 feet.

In the 12th century, anybody who was anybody had an enormous bedstead for man, wife, children, guests, and even the traveler who asked for lodging. An enormous bedstead was a medieval status symbol.

Here's Trick To Decorate Small Room

The trick is decorating a small bedroom is not so much the amount of space you have at your disposal, but how well you use it.

To make a room appear larger, consider using soft pastels or even stark white paint.

Don't try to divide the room into varied areas. Instead, use multi-purpose furniture which can be utilized at all times in the room.

FOR INSTANCE, use a table as a desk. A bed pushed against the wall can function both as sleeping and seating area. And probably most important of all, plan to have a place for everything . . . and then be sure everything is in its place.

Perhaps one of the best ways to provide quick change artistry in a small bedroom is by the selection of a new bedspread. A decorative hound's tooth weave, such as "Starchecks," a tweedy effect in multi-muted colors, or a plain textural weave, tailor-trimmed with handsome cording might prove a happy choice.

Designed for all-day living, materials are completely washable and require no ironing.

A SMALL room that must perform many functions can help to establish the habit of tidiness. Small quarters can also provide the greatest challenge to our ingenuity, and provide us with great satisfaction when they're beautifully done.

Creative thinking in such cases is more important than big budgets.

VERSATILITY IS THE key to successful furniture design today. For instance, this beautifully designed credenza in pecan veneer that is certain to become the focal point of any living room. It can provide storage of many kinds. And it is ideal for the hi-fi buff who likes to assemble his own components. Buffet parties are another occasion in which it shines. The three latticed front doors slide.

THE GRACEFUL oval curves of this countertop lavatory, combined with its handsome sculptured styling, adds a note of high-fashion to any bathroom.

THE THEME IS Early American, but the plumbing in this bathroom is as up-to-date as tomorrow. Twin vanity lavatories speed traffic during bathroom "rush hours," and the off-the-floor water closet makes mopping the floor a breeze.

HIGH FASHION

Some New Ideas For Bathrooms

They're not making bathrooms the way they used to.

No longer the "poor stepchildren" of the home' today's baths get as much or more attention than the other rooms.

There's a good reason for it.

Home owners now have a new attitude about the usefulness of the bath — and new, exciting ideas about how to make them beautiful and convenient. Dressing and personal grooming in many homes have been transferred to the bathroom where they belong.

THUS THE bath has graduated from a strictly functional room to one of the first importance in the scheme of modern living.

The new freedom concept in bathroom planning is reflected in the modern styling of fixtures, innovations in design and exciting new color combinations. Gone is the cold, "clinical" look of past years—it has been replaced by one of colorful, comfortable elegance.

White, far from being extinct, still accounts for nearly half of the fixture sales across the country.

Lavatories, perhaps more than any other fixtures, have been adapted to modern, high styling. They are available in sizes, colors and shapes to suit any taste and to fit any type of decor—modern or period.

There's a major trend in lavatories to built-in or countertop installations. These popular vanity-lavatories can double as dressing tables with the added convenience of hot and cold water.

VANITY-lavatories, when installed in bedrooms, permit women to devote as much time as they please to personal grooming, without monopolizing facilities of the family bath.

Another growing favorite is twin lavatories—lavatories installed side-by-side, back-to-back or set at an angle to each other. Double lavatories are popular because of their obvious double convenience.

Attracting a great deal of attention among homeowners in recent months have been the new lavatories produced with decorative designs around the perimeter of the bowls. Among the patterns available are floral, Victorian, early American and Grecian.

TO CARRY OUT this high-style theme in bathroom decorating, some manufacturers even offer accessories in matching patterns — including toilet seats, door knobs, wall and floor tile, water-proof wallpaper, towel sets and shower curtains.

Modern bathtubs, too, feature many new developments. They come in a wide variety of sizes and models to meet almost any space requirement, ranging from the large, luxurious sunken models ot the highly compact receptor types.

The receptor bathtub is especially well-suited for showering, and for bathing children. It provides a shower-tub combination in an area slightly larger than a yard square, and has a built-in corner seat.

MOST TUBS can be equipped with a device to provide a whirling water motion for easing tensions.

Off-the-floor water closets, bringing a new level of cleanliness and sanitation to residential bathrooms, are gaining increased attention among homeowners, and consequently, among manufacturers. Installed on supports located behind the wall like commercial units, these modern fixtures make floor cleaning easy and permit wall-to-wall bathroom floor carpeting.

Other trends in water closet design include a model that features a compartmentized flush tank lid that provides space for a sunken planter with an adjoining area for a box of facial tissues.

Manufacturers of one-piece units have carried this styling even further by offering low-height installations to fit small spaces. One offers a regular-size model with a triangular tank for installation in corners.

There's a trend to single control faucets for lavatories and bath-shower combinations. They combine "hot-cold" and "on-off" functions into one handy dial or lever, reducing control to a one-hand basis.

Other bathroom furnishings, such as shower doors, dental lavatories, shower cabinets, medicine cabinets and towel racks have been improved similarly to suit modern ideas of design.

ONE SHOWER door manufacturer offers folding doors with removable panels so that the color or design of the door can be changed to match any change in decorating color scheme. It provides a quick and economical way to give a abthroom a substantial "face-lift."

Producers of chromium-plated brass faucets, fittings and accessories report climbing sales, indicating another trend by recorators and homeowners. Also widely in evidence are lucite faucet handles, both in color and monogrammed.

Fixtures, while functional and attractive, represent only the surface of the plumbing system. The other essential part is the piping, much of which is concealed under the floors and walls.

IN PLUMBING, what you don't see is just as important as what you see. Only if the piping is properly designed and the fixtures correctly installed can the homeowner get the full benefits that today's beautiful bathrooms are designed to provide.

Your qualified plumbing contractor or dealer is the man best equipped to recommend bathroom products and decor and to make the installation. He can also provide you with a wide selection of booklets and other literature that contain helpful ideas on fixture selection and choice of colors.

Narrow Slat Blinds For Picture Window

Picture windows are more popular than ever.

And an ideal window treatment for large glass areas are graceful, new narrow-slat Venetian blinds.

A narrow-slat—half the width of conventional blind slats—combined with slim dacron cords in place of tapes, affords far greater "see-through" when blinds are open. Another advantage of narrow-slat blinds are their delicate, graceful appearance, perfect for large window areas and modern interiors.

A Powder Room Is Worth The Cost

Everyone's heard the old maxim, "Good things come in small packages." This is particularly true in describing powder rooms for both new and existing homes.

Most people try to plan their homes to give family and friends the utmost in comfort and convenience. In terms of materially increasing the value of a home, as well as increasing convenience, a powder room is well worth considering.

It can save countless steps in any home, and is a particular blessing to elderly persons who find it strenuous climbing stairs to a bathroom on the second floor.

Another big point in its favor is that it can easily be kept clean for the use of visiting friends. Never again will someone have to rush to clean up the main bathroom when unexpected guests knock on the front door.

If you are thinking of building a home, it will pay you to talk to the architect about making provisions for a powder room.

TASTEFUL USE of tile can produce attractive bathrooms such as this one. Decorator tiles with their patterns join with the wallpaper to lend an unusual touch to the room. Note also the two-tone flooring of tile. Tile Sales Co., of San Rafael, is the home of the materials and tools needed by the do-it-yourselfer for tiling projects.

The Three Major Factors In The Sale Of Houses

The three most important areas which affect the selling price of a house are the kitchen, bathrooms and basement, according to a survey of bankers and officials of other lending institutions.

These men are the experts who must decide how large a loan they can safely make on a house—their decisions are based on what they think a house would bring in the open market.

It is the consensus of these lending officials that, to bring the best price, a house should have a spacious, modern kitchen; ample and up-to-date bath facilities, and a basement large enough to accommodate storage, workshop and possibly a recreation room.

In most cases, it is the woman who really buys the home.

Her husband may sign the check, but she generally has the final word concerning the kind of house her family will live in. And since she spends a good part of her day in the kitchen, she wants a room that is large, light, conveniently arranged with modern appliances.

She is equally interested in having an adequate number of bathrooms, the number depending on the size of the family and number of bedrooms. If the house has two floors, she will want at least a bath on each. The trend today is toward a bath with every bedroom, or at least a vanity lavatory in each.

The New Furniture Finishes Are Dark And Slightly Glossy

Rustic, Modern Styles Going Brunette In The '65 Fashions

THE DARKER look of oak, pecan, elm, ash and hickory gives one the feeling of having stumbled upon a gem of an antique, blackened by age.

More surprising is the newest dark-toned finish on modern furniture. Except for the chocolate brown of deeply oiled walnut, modern furniture assemblages have heretofore been brightened by the tawny tones of teak. Soft, almost caramel shades of pecan, bleached walnut and "natural" brown mahogany tones have also enlivened modern groupings.

These new darker shadings have a transparent quality and clear depth as compared with the muddy dark finishes of the thirties.

THE FINE Hardwoods Assn. points out new finishes require as many as 18 different steps to achieve. Beauty, durability and protection are the three basic features of all furniture finishes.

While the steps to achieve durability and protection of the wood against moisture absorption may be achieved in from three to seven operations—the transparent effect, with subtle tones and shades over the wood, but not in it, requires many more steps, all of them done by hand.

Finish producers have developed new synthetic materials with just enough gloss to look well cared for, but without the high shine we Americans somehow associate with "cheap." Europeans seem to like modern furniture to really shine.

More traditional, lighter antiqued finishes on fine furniture also require the same hand processes.

Pecan Comes Pre-Antiqued

A plentiful American tree, pecan had been passed over for generations as a furniture wood.

A style dictate and modern technology combined to bring pecan out of the Southern forests and into the most high fashion living room.

Interest in simulated antique finishes necessitated expensive laborous hand work in the furniture finishing rooms. When technicians found a method of slicing pecan veneers advantageously, it was discovered the wood naturally had infinitesimal markings that lend themselves to the fashionable antiqued appearance.

Besides this, furniture producers found pecan to be very hard, with good stability and fairly easy to work.

Like cherry wood, pecan for furniture making comes from wild trees, not those grown for edible nuts or fruit.

THEY ARE DINING IN THE ROUND

The American homemaker sets the trends in home furnishings. Proof lies in the upsurge of popularity of round dining tables.

Only a short time ago, manufacturers would have shrugged off the importance of "dining in the round." But today, most of them would not dream of introducing a new dining collection without prominently featuring a circular table.

Mrs. America asked for it. And what she wants, she gets!

Most of all, homemaking wisdom has brought about the resurgence of round tables. A woman knows the congenial feeling a round table imparts to the diners. She also loves the fact that there are no bruising corners to duck around, or to warn junior about. And unquestionably, round tables take up less space.

Linens manufacturers have kept up, too. Round tablecloths have always been available. But today, there are also round place mats. And there are beautiful oval cloths to use when an inserted leaf makes your round pedestal table oblong.

THE ORGAN CAN BE a handsome piece of furniture in your home, as well as a fine, rich musical instrument. The Everett Organ, above, built by Hammond Organ Co., is the result of many years of experimentation in developing a sound satisfactory to the ears of the most discerning musician. It is on display at Sherman-Clay in San Rafael.

One Way To Lick The Noise

What's worse than a hard day's night?

Perhaps a hard night's day!

For those who have to work at night, getting a good day's sleep may be the most difficult problem they face. Light, noise, daytime distractions, all add up to interfere with needed rest.

FOR THAT matter, very few night sleepers rise with the dawn, and most prefer darkness until they do get up.

Precautions can be taken to reduce insomnia caused by light and noise. Although some people could sleep in Grand Central Station, most require a restful, dark atmosphere.

One of the best ways to achieve darkness is through the use of special "sleep" Venetian blinds. Originally developed for classroom audio-visual use, the merits of these blinds to really darken a bedroom were quickly realized.

THEY HAVE special slats designed to prevent light leakage. The back of each slat is notched, allowing the slats to overlap tightly.

Special tapes, which can accommodate a greater number of slats, are another feature of the "sleep" Venetian blind.

Another type of blind developed to lock out light has "S" shaped slats which flow together in a pleasing, decorative manner.

Other light-reducing features of "sleep" Venetian blinds include special, light-sealing blind heads and light trap channels which can be installed at the sides of windows to prevent the entrance of light around the edges of the blinds. Equipped with plastic tapes, they're extremely durable and easy to keep clean, and they're available in a wide range of colors, making them a decorative asset as well as a sleep aid.

"SLEEP" Venetian blinds are available wherever blinds are sold and are only slightly more expensive than standard Venetian blinds.

With the light problem taken care of, the apartment-dweller in particular may find noise is a major source of irritation in his search for sleep. Not only must he contend with street noises, but with the neighbors as well.

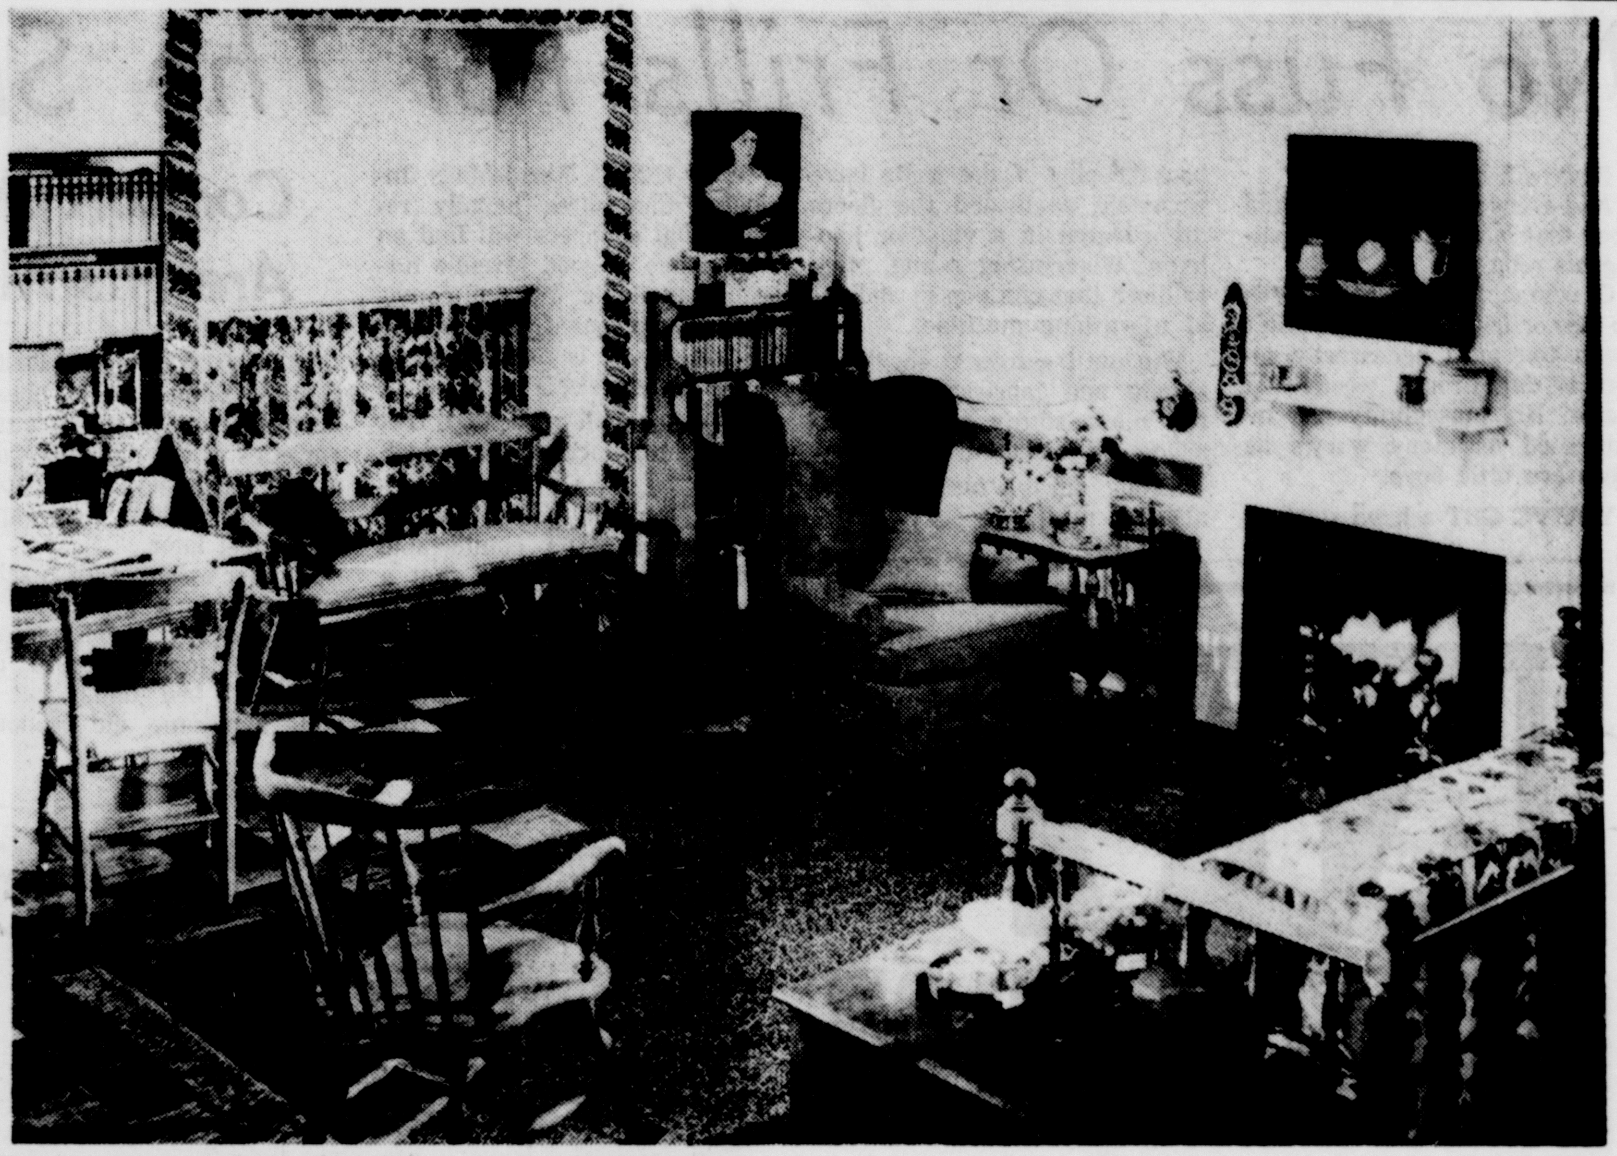
ANOTHER IS the installation of acoustical tiling on the ceiling. This tiling can absorb up to 75 per cent of room noise. This is quite a simple job and fairly inexpensive.

To sum up, anyone in search of a good day's (or night's) sleep has a number of modestly-priced methods available for light and noise control. Those who take advantage of them will find "pleasant dreams", whether day or night.



ETHAN ALLEN FURNITURE is synonymous with the warmth and comfort of outstanding Early American decor. It is also the subject of a current contest conducted in conjunction with Bride & Home magazine. Contestants may obtain entry blanks at Marin County Furniture, San Rafael, dealers in the Ethan Allen line. They then indicate their choice of one of five rooms of furniture, including the country sitting room pictured above, as the one they want to win, indicating their selection by numbers designated by the Ethan Allen Treasury Book which is free to participants. In 20 words or less, the contestant also tells the mood he or she would attempt to create with the furniture shown. Entries are to be mailed to Bride & Home.

No Fuss Or Frills For The Small Boy

Comfort And Durability Are His Major Needs

Boys will be boys.

And every son's mother should keep that in mind when decorating his room.

Of course, the unwritten law is no fuss or frills. But that doesn't mean you must necessarily resort to dark, rough woods and plaids. His masculinity can be expressed as many ways as there are little boys.

YOU'VE GOT a head start on housekeeping if the walls have washable paint and the floors are covered in a vinyl or linoleum. When using a rug, stick to those that can pop in and out of a washing machine.

Window treatments should be simple and fabrics throughout the room sturdy and, if possible, soil resistant.

Strong, durable furniture is an absolute must.

THE HOME Furnishings Industry Committee happily reports that shoppers will find an abundance of good juvenile furniture available. Most all comes with mar resistant finishes, and in this age, it is impractical to buy anything else.

Shoppers will also find that much of this furniture is budget-priced.

First essential for the young man's room is a comfortable bed (and keep in mind that a good, firm mattress is important for his health). For two in a room, brothers or "spending the night," box springs arranged end to end, bunk beds or the revised trundle beds are ideal.

IN ADDITION to a chest for clothes, some sort of chest is needed for toys. There are many varieties of the campaign chest around, and they are especially good buys, for toys today, sports equipment later.

Several manufacturers offer desk and bed units that are quite handsome and economize space.

SINCE MOST boys are incessant collectors, plenty of storage space is another must. Adequate storage will help clear the floor for more play area and help to encourage his housekeeping as well.

Many parents have found that the new modular systems are a good investment in a child's room. They make use of wall space as well as display his treasures.

The Piano Makes A Comeback As A 'Must' In American Homes

Music, music everywhere—the more you listen the more you want to make it.

Or so it seems.

Americans are participators not just listeners when it comes to making music and the piano, despite its higher cost compared to some other instruments, shows a big gain in popularity.

DURING THE past few years, over a quarter of a million home-type pianos have been sold annually. Recorded music instrument sales have also reached new high peaks. In the past two years, sales of player pianos have begun to climb toward the popularity of pre-radio days.

Perhaps the smaller grand piano and the tone perfection of the small upright, both of which can easily be placed in our currently smaller rooms has had much to do with the piano's popularity.

But tone quality comes first.

BOTH THE sounding board and the case beauty depend on the modern hardwood plywood principle.

The sounding board is made of three layers or plys. The center ply grain runs in opposite direction from the two outer layers. This disperses the tone in more directions, giving greater resonance and volume. The harp is supported and fastened to kiln dried elm and the several stout elm posts give stability to the entire unit.

The curve of the grand piano is steam bent plywood, which like all other large, exposed areas in the case of either upright or grand is laminated into a permanent bond.

CABINET GRADE plywood, with selected face veneers of a variety of hardwood species makes the large areas of the case.

Mahogany, walnut, pecan, butternut, oak, and teak are in veneers currently selected and finished to harmonize with other wood furniture.

Why Not Bring Us Your Favorite Old Lamp for Rejuvenation?

Wallpaper Is Easy On Bride's Budget

Decorating on a shoestring, as many young marrieds have discovered, can bring results that are as attractive and satisfying as any a decorating consultant could produce.

If you have a budget for redoing a room, it's wise to consult an expert who can bring your ideas to fruition quickly or offer dramatic schemes of his own. But if time and imagination are what you have to spend, go ahead and try it on your own.

Lipstick, powder and paint have transformed many a "Plain Jane" into a "Lovely Lady."

You can observe a similar metamorphosis in a single room, or a whole house, with knowing application of elbow grease, sandpaper, paint and wallpaper. Inexpensive in comparison to the dramatic effects it can create, wallpaper in the hands of an imaginative decorator has more uses than its name implies.

Used as a wallcovering it can provide texture, color and pattern in a room.

It can serve as neutral background for a multi-hued color scheme or as a contrast in pattern scale. With scenic illustrations or an unusual pattern, it can become the focal point for a room's decor. It can give illusions of height, width or depth to minimize a room's architectural defects.

With remnants of wallpaper from a major decorating job, you can cover kitchen canisters, bedroom or bathroom wastebaskets, create a matched set of desk accessories, camouflage an old chest for a child's room or cut out gay designs and apply them to walls or chests.

In recent years the vast array of patterns, colors and textures in wallpaper designs has been handsomely supplemented by matching fabrics. Today's home decorator can make small rooms seem larger by correlating designs in draperies, upholstery or slip covers, and wallpaper.

Wallpaper nowadays is easy to apply, often just a one-woman, one-day job, particularly if you use the adhesive-backed varieties that need only water to revitalize the paste.

The up-to-date wallpaper designers have expanded their realm beyond the flower-sprigged Victorian prints of Grandma's day. If you want to match kitchen tiles or living room accessories or a paint color that's particularly exciting, chances are you'll find the pattern you want in wallpaper.

Take a look at the new textured and flocked wallcoverings — more expensive but often worth the price if you want to create a real sensation.

If you have courage to experiment, you'll discover a boldly patterned wallpaper can practically decorate a room for you, and inexpensively since you minimize the need for pictures or other wall hangings. A paper in a formal or scenic design is particularly well suited to increase the importance of a small ill-lit foyer.

A small bedroom will feel light and airy if the proper paper covers the walls.

Provincial and traditional patterns are handsome in playroom, den, bedroom or an informal living room. All-over patterns are practical because they are less apt to show soil. They're easy to hang because the pattern repeats frequently.

In bathrooms and powder rooms, wallpaper in a bright, gay design can tell a whimsical story or utilize unusual colors that would be unsuitable in larger rooms. Plastic-treated or water-resistant paper comes clean of sticky fingermarks or grease spots with just the swipe of a damp sponge.

The beauty of wallpaper is that it continues to fit, without great expense, into a grand plan for decorating. If your first scheme for a room begins to look bland and unexciting, it's easy to spice up the arrangement with brand new walls.

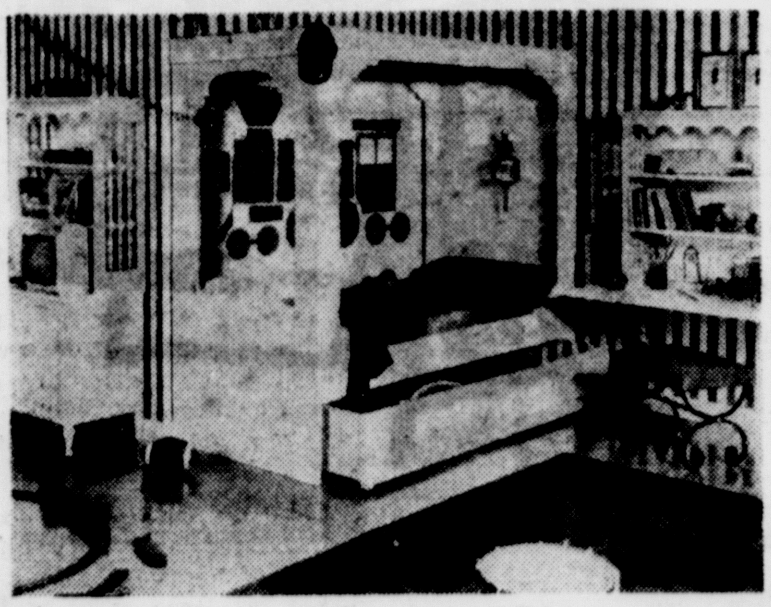
THESE TEAK WALL UNITS represent the finest in Danish workmanship, quality woods and modern furniture design. They are both distinctive and functional. Copenhagen, House of Danish Furniture, in San Rafael, has these and many other selections of fine imported Danish furniture on display.

Color Sets Need Fewer Repairs

Owners of color television sets are benefiting in two ways from technological improvements made recently in the sets they now operate.

First, today's sets require fewer service calls and, second, when adjustments are needed it takes less time and expense now.

Five years ago color TV set owners averaged about 3.2 calls for repairs each year. Today the average is about 2.5 calls or just .5 more than the typical black and white set, according to TV dealers in Northern and Central California.



WHERE THE BOYS are is where the toys are. What to do? One answer is a trundle, a delightful, dual-purpose bed happily left over from the Colonial days when folks were noted for their practicality. The deep drawer pulls out to hide all the treasure or to sleep a guest. A mattress fits neatly into the drawer, thereby accommodating one person. Finish is brushed white on this Kent-Coffey manufactured product.

When To Replace The Old?

It's Decision All Furniture Owners Face

A perplexing problem for many homemakers is when to replace their furniture.

Some believe that any one piece should stay until it literally collapses. Others buy when new styling trends seem to demand it.

OF COURSE there is no "right" time for every woman.

The Home Furnishings Industry Committee points out that most consumers pay less to furnish an entire room than they do to purchase a new car. Auto depreciation is readily accepted. Yet many homemakers expect virtually unlimited performance from their expenditures for home furnishings.

It is indeed true that quality built furniture is in usable condition for decades. However, even the best of furniture pieces does wear out eventually and people's tastes change periodically.

HOMEMAKERS who want their homes lovely for their families, relatives and guests should periodically review their rooms and the furniture. Pieces that fail to measure up to high standards of comfort and attractiveness should be earmarked for replacement.

Those that have grown outdated or no longer fit into the home's changing decor should give way to new, fresh pieces.

AN ATTRACTIVE MARRIAGE of Boston antiques with contemporary furniture is demonstrated here as the two are combined, tastefully, with selected Oriental rugs. This interior design approach, by Dorothy Farber Interior Design of San Anselmo, is a perfect solution for the flawless merger of an eclectic room grouping.

The Love Seat Is More Popular Than Ever

This romantic small sofa has been proving three's-a-crowd for centuries.

THE HOME Furnishings Industry Committee reports that new introductions indicate it is more popular than ever. Love seats are available in virtually every style and price range.

This chameleon-like seating can adapt to most any mood—add wings and chintz and it's cozy and warm; strip it down to fine carved wood and it's an elegant, classic bench.

As versatile as it is charming, the love seat presents none of the limitations of longer sofas.

IT IS JUST right for small apartments, ideal in a master bedroom, under a window or in a foyer. It is often mated today with another love seat and used to L shape a corner or face each other.

And could there be a better way to say it with love on a birthday, anniversary or wedding day?

GAME TABLES are very much "in" today. And their many possibilities for family relaxation and for entertaining guarantee them a long and happy future. This grouping has the charm of Mediterranean styling. Crafted from solid mahogany, the 34-inch glass top table sets the mood with Moorish-Spanish fretwork. The flavor is continued with the scissor chairs. Hilbritin Chair Co. is the manufacturer.

Cards?

THE STYLES offered today range from provincial to modern, romantic to off-beat. And all come with comfortable match-up chairs. Many are available in accent colors or with finishes and designs that correlate with specific furniture groupings.

The game table is obviously at home in den, solarium, recreation or family room, but it is by no means limited to the "casual." Nor is its function strictly for card and board games.

The game table is an ideal party table, perfect for intimate dinners-for-two, for small buffets, brunches or just snack time. And could there be a more gracious service for coffee and cakes?

The Venetian Blind Solves A Problem

The decorator who wants a colorful window treatment, yet hesitates, lest clashing colors spoil the uniform exterior appearance of the house, now has freedom to use as many interior colors as she wants.

Venetian blinds with "duplex slats" which are one color on one side, another on the other, solve the problem. Windows will appear one color from the outside, yet will harmonize with the interior decor.

The Family Room Has Come Of Age With Dressy Look

Something new is appearing in up-to-date homes in California these days—this is a room which last year might have been called a family room or playroom, but which now has matured into a new look and status.

The old family room too often was "furnished" with a conglomeration of castoff pieces . . . "that old sofa which used to be in the living room" . . . or . . . "the rocker Janey spilled hot chocolate on" . . . or, better, last summer's patio furniture brought inside for its final days.

The idea was that one should not put anything too good into the family room, because no one but the family ever saw it anyway.

Now, however, the family room has come of age.

It is more sophisticated, more formal—a place to entertain friends, although the family may also relax in it. Because, with all its increased sophistication and formality, it is still easy to care for. That new, dressy look is not delicate.

From the carpeted floor up, the furnishings for that new family room insure ease in maintaining a smart, attractive appearance. Modern materials and production methods now eliminate the worry of putting "good" furnishings into this much-used room.

'Furniture Look'

Some of the new electric refrigerator-freezers have a brand new "furniture look." Called "console" or "breakfront" models, they have a countertop for food preparation between the upper refrigerator section and the freezer section below.

Cleaning Tips By Experts

Keep Your Furniture Looking Nice

The Home Furnishings Industry Committee advises that even if leather upholstery and tabletops don't look dirty, they should be washed regularly because soil can discolor leather and also make it sticky.

To keep leather clean, sponge the surface with very thick suds skimmed off the top of a soap or detergent solution. Follow up by rinsing with a clean damp cloth, and then wipe dry.

A MINIMUM of water is sufficient since leather is non-absorbent, soil settles only on the surface and comes off with just the "swish of a sponge."

To keep rattan, cane, reed and rush chair seats clean, simply sponge the surface with warm soapsuds and rinses. This also helps to "shrink" any sagging seat taut again. After drying for several days, the seat can be shellacked if you ever need to restain then apply a finish coat of white shellac and denatured alcohol mixed in equal parts. Besides sealing the stain, this mixture provides a washable finish which can be sponged clean with warm suds and rinses.

Painted or enameled furniture can be kept clean by applying "dry" soapsuds, made by beating a handful of soap with a little water to produce a stiff, meringue-like lather.

SIMPLY sponge the furniture with this rinse, wipe several times with a damp cloth and dry with a clean cloth. Then wax or polish may be applied.

Plastic upholstery is a pleasure to keep clean. All you have to do is sponge the surface often with warm soap or detergent suds and rinses, completing one section of the furniture at a time. Little water is needed in washing, since soil remains on the surface of non-porous plastic, and woven plastic upholstery simply sheds the surplus water.

Although some plastic surfaces are enhanced by a light wax coating, never use it on upholstery. The reason: wax does not penetrate the surface and some excess might later rub off on clothing.

THE FURNITURE FOR your home stereo system can be designed to fit your home. This three-piece walnut system rests on a walnut bench to give it the one-in-all look. The record player is on a slide-out drawer as is the Ampex tape recorder. The television was mounted into the wall above the set. However, it was connected from behind into the stereo console for a richer sound. The custom stereo system was designed by C. J. Catania, and was built and installed by employees at Catania Sound, San Rafael. (Photo by George Wheeler)

Shoddy Finish Can Ruin Project

Ever had the experience of looking at an item of furniture (not your own, of course) that had the instant appearance of a home-made project — although you couldn't quite place your finger on what was wrong with it?

If so, the chance are there was very little, if anything, wrong with the construction. What made it look amateurish was the shoddy finish.

It is curious how many home handymen will take great pains to construct something that is functional, pleasing to the eye and precisely made — only to spoil it all with an ill-conceived and careless finishing job.

THE REASON is probably psychological: Having turned out an article that took considerable time and attention, the worker can hardly wait to complete the final steps. He slaps on the finishing material and then calls the other members of the family to look over his handiwork.

Naturally, everyone thinks it's wonderful. And considering the experience, or lack of it, of the home carpenter, it probably is. But it could have been a lot better if even half as much time had been taken with the finish as with the construction.

The number one rule of good finishing, therefore, is to take your time. It has been our experience, for instance, that you cannot make a mistake by allowing a little more time between coats than the manufacturer recommends on the label of his product, but that you certainly can make a mistake by not allowing enough time.

IN USING clear finishes, sandings between coats usually are essential to a good finish. And many final coats can be improved with light sanding or rubbing with either pumice and/or rottenstone.

In some cases, the possibility of obtaining a perfect finish is eliminated before a brush is ever applied to the wood. This occurs when a surface is thoroughly sanded and either not cleaned sufficiently or cleaned and left in a dust-ridden atmosphere for a few hours before beginning to apply a finish.

Professional wood finishers often use what is called a "tack rag" on the wood just before they start varnishing. Saturate a clean cloth with turpentine and wring it partially dry. Sprinkle it with varnish and wring it out again. Wipe the wood with this cloth and the surface will become completely clean.

THE TACK RAG will pick up grit particles that cling to the wood when it has been merely wiped with a dry cloth.

Another trick that can be used when applying varnish requires only a wooden toothpick. When a speck of dust hits the varnish during the application, touch the end of the toothpick to it. The dust will stick to the toothpick.

Do this only when the varnish has been applied and is still wet.

New Sleep Sofas Are Well Engineered

Sleep sofas have come out of their awkward stage and into a design category that makes it hard to distinguish them from standard sofas.

The old-fashioned sleep sofas had badly-concealed contraptions to unfold the bed.

But the new units are well-engineered and come in all the handsome styles of regular sofas, slim or ample in proportions.

YOU SIT well and sleep comfortably in a unit that harmonizes with decor, whether it is in the French, Italian, Spanish, Early American, or contemporary-modern style. The fabric selection also is equally as good as for regular sofas.

The day bed—This sofa has no mechanical action or moving parts. Ordinarily, it has no back, but its arm ends are usually fairly high and act as "head and foot" when the unit is used for sleeping. Day beds are practical for efficiency apartments or dens.

THE SOFA bed's mechanism permits the back to drop down level with the seat. This forms a double bed and there are no cushions to remove.

Sofa sleepers unfold, after the seat cushions are removed, to provide complete beds with springs and a mattress.

If you are shopping for either a sofa bed or a sofa sleeper, you many want to check the units for these qualities:

GOOD SEATING is important. Check the unit for resilience and support.

Cushioning should be even and firm across the seat, and not slack or soften up toward the arms.

The springs should be properly attached to the frame, not loose or so delicate that they would fall off with ordinary use.

The supports should be adequate to hold the weight of occupants. The mattress should be retained all around to stay in one position.

CHECK THE mechanical devices for ease of opening and closing the bed. The bed should lock into position when folded out and be restored without difficulty.

Cabinetmaker Is A Key Man In Copenhagen

The cabinetmaker holds a very special position among craftsmen within the Danish handicrafts trade.

During the last 37 years, the cabinetmakers of Copenhagen have annually held an exhibition in the Danish capital. Time and again they have not only demonstrated that an old handicraft can survive in an industrial society, but even more important, that it can pioneer and inspire an entire industry.

The Danish furniture trade owes its growth to the Copenhagen Cabinetmakers' Guild. From an aesthetic and social viewpoint, it was the cabinetmakers who prepared the ground for the new Danish furniture production.
